Tenth and Greatest
What a Newspaper Needs
Sensation for Mussolini
For Those That Mean

—By Arthur Brisbane—

HEARST RANCH, San Simeon, Cal., Aug. 14—The Olympic contests finished in a blaze of glory for Uncle Sam. Helene Madison, of Seattle, won another race, broke one more world record.

Young California oarsmen won the Olympic eight-oared championship. Today there will be speeches, congratulations, and the tenth and most successful Olympiad, with the greatest list of broken world records, will be over.

Los Angeles and all California are grateful to three men, especially. To William May Garland, whose hard, persistent work brought the games to California; to Zack J. Farmer, who studied the games at Antwerp, and built, well in advance, the organization that has conducted the games so efficiently; to H. O. Davis, who built and equipped the brand new village for the 1600 visiting athletes, and took care of them there, and to the visitors from all over America and the world.

Those visitors have learned, and will report, that if you want to do a big thing, in a big way, California is the place.

Those at this ranch include David E. Towne, important in the Hearst organization. He knows about newspapers, and buys what they need, including 568,000 tons of newsprint paper, in a year.

That newsprint, which does not include paper for the numerous Hearst magazines, calls for $1,056,000.00 worth of ink.

If you planted 200,000 acres of this ranch with spruce trees and waited 30 years for the trees to mature you would get from the 200,000-acre forest enough paper to print the Hearst newspapers for only one year and seven months.

The Hearst magazines, Cosmopolitan, Good Housekeeping, Harper's Bazaar and the others call for 50,630 tons of coated paper each year.

For every five and a half newspaper pages printed in the United States, daily and Sunday, one is a Hearst newspaper page. And the other daily newspapers number about 2000, as against Hearst's 26 dailies.

When young W. R. Hearst came out of Harvard and told his father, Senator Hearst, that he wanted to run the San Francisco-Examiner, Senator Hearst said, "All right about the Examiner, Willy, but what BUSINESS do you want to take up?" He thought newspapers could hardly be a real business, but he was mistaken.

Visitors to California will tell the world that this climate is NOT enervating. Anthropologists say the ancient California Indians were the most sluggish of any race, lived largely on grasshoppers, and such wild things, because they lacked energy to go after deer.

Their successors, the white Pacific Coast residents, go after everything, and get it, especially world athletic records. What they have done to former Olympic performances would come, naturally, under the head of cruelty to athletes.

Mussolini will vibrate, and say queer things in Italian, when he hears the details of that eight-oared race. Italy was ahead, America next, Canada came third, Great Britain fourth.

Three so-called Nordic races all trailing one Latin boat. It was in the last few hundred meters that the powerful, deep-lunged Italians forged ahead, each man carrying on his chest the colors of Italy. It seemed certain that Italy would win, in the country that an Italian discovered.

But in boat number two, eight young athletes, with the United States shield on their chests, had made different plans. A small man at the far end of the boat, a megaphone strapped to his mouth, called on every divinity from Moloch on, to punish his men, if they did not put their backs into it.

They put their backs into it, also the muscles of their long, powerful legs and arms.

And they beat the Italians by exactly two-fifths of a second, which is as good as half an hour, and more exciting.

Where will Mussolini find words to express his emotions when he reads that? There are no words—the great Italian will have to rely on gestures and moans.

By the way, Italy finished second, of course; Canada third, Britain fourth. Time for 2,000 meters, 6 minutes 37 3-5 seconds.

Wonderful weather, marvelous summer climate, up and down this coast, from San Diego to Seattle. High mountains on one side, great ocean on the other, fertile valleys, covered with fruits and flowers between. Good roads for motors, perfect rail service, and for those in a

PRIVATE LINE INSTALLED FOR POLICE

Probers in the Welfare Frauds Hope to Gain Information This Way in Cleanup Drive

A private telephone line for receiving secret information regarding welfare frauds will be installed in police headquarters, it was announced today, as reports from the various stations indicated a large percentage of fraud in cases already investigated.

Deputy Supt. Thomas F. Goode said the private line would be installed because it was believed many persons with valuable information hesitate to call up through the regular switchboard.

Goode, who is in charge of the special bureau of public aid investigation, said that the reports from the police station must be checked for accuracy and that only officers directly connected with the bureau will go to court when fraud is ofund.

Discovery of an East Boston man recipient of city aid, with $1250 in the bank, was a highlight of the police investigation of the welfare cases today.

ONE REPORTED DEAD

Capt. James Claflin of the West End division said, regarding reports that one man on the welfare rolls in his district was dead, that no record of his death has been found, but information has been given the police that such is the case.

Goode said he could not discuss cases because while the various divisions have gone a considerable distance in their investigation,

Los Angeles Knows How To Do It

—By DAMON RUNYON—

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 15 (US)

Dear folks: As one of the visiting firemen, permit me to congratulate you on the greatest show, in the 10th Olympiad, that the world has ever seen.

And that goes for sports, or anything else.

In magnificence and splendor, and in minute detail, and in smoothness of operation, there has never been anything like it.

Now don't say, "Well, there goes El Runyon with the old oil." Don't say that.

El Runyon has grabbed about all the hospitality, and free tickets, and things of that kind that he can hope for in one session, so there's no reason why he should apply the lubricant.

Except, folks, it comes from the heart.

You take the things so doggone casually that I sometimes wonder if you realize just what you've accomplished. Here I've been running around, all in a sweat, and pop-eyed with astonishment for the past two weeks muttering, "Gosh, what a spectacle!" and you have merely smiled at my be-dazement, and said, calmly:

"Glad you like it," as if it meant nothing at all.

Maybe you've been kidding me. Maybe you're so accustomed to put-

SHOE WORKERS ROUTED BY FIRE

Haverhill, Aug. 15—A large number of shoe workers were thrown out of work temporarily today as a result of a general alarm fire which swept a four-story building in Washington st., burning out the Kennedy Power Company.

The blaze, which caused damage estimated at $20,000, started in the basement and worked up through the brick building. The Bay State Counter Company on the second floor and a number of other stores were sufferers.

According to Fire Chief William H. Hawkins, the fire started from oil in the basement of the Kennedy Power Company, which supplies power to a number of shoe companies.

For a time the entire shoe manufacturing district was threatened, necessitating the sounding of a general alarm. The building, owned by Dennis T. Kennedy, is located opposite the Boston & Maine station.

After battling for two hours, firemen brought the blaze under control.

Efforts to Float Fisherman Fail

Efforts to drag the auxiliary fishing schooner E. Raymonds, with 10 men aboard, off Brewster Spit where the vessel grounded last night, failed today. Further attempts will be made tonight. The two-mast vessel, owned by the Atlantic Fish Supply Co. of Gloucester, met with the mishap while bound for Boston with swordfish. Brewster Spit is off Hull.

Man Dies of Poison Mistaken for Cure

BULLETIN

The fishing schooner Natalie Hammond, with a stricken sailor aboard, was located by the coast guard patrol boat Jackson, shortly before noon today. No position or other details were given in the radio dispatch.

Picture on Page 4

Out in the expanse of the north Atlantic today a dozen patrol boats and five destroyers searched for four men in a coast guard plane, believed lost on an errand of mercy.

The plane, piloted by Lieut. R. L. Burk and carrying Commander Fletcher Brown, Thomas McKenzie, radio operator, and Wesley Saunders, mechanic, was on a search for the fishing schooner Natalie Hammond, with a dying sailor aboard.

At 3 a. m., six hours after it left the Gloucester base, a weak radio message from the plane reported:

"Gas running low. Trying to make shore."

12 BOATS IN SEARCH

Seven patrol boats were ordered on the search from the Gloucester base, five were sent from East Boston and the destroyers Shaw, McDougall, UUpshaw and two others took up the search.

Mrs. Brown, wife of Comdr. Brown, was reported in collapse at her Gloucester home while the search was underway.

The Navy Department was standing by, ready to answer a call from their fellow seamen.

Two coast guard planes were

PLAINVILLE MAN NAMED SLAYER

A verdict that Edward Wood of High st., Plainville, deliberately shot Wright Sargent of Plainville and caused his death, was returned today by Judge Saunders in Franklin court in his report of an inquest into the death, filed today in Dedham.

Sargent was shot May 16 and died on May 29 from embolism, allegedly caused by the gunshot wound in his leg.

The inquest report recites that on May 16, Sargent and his son visited the Wood home, where Mrs. Julia Cowan was also a visitor, and that the elder Sargent paid objectionable attentions to the woman.

Wood, according to the inquest, ordered Sargent from the house and picked up a shotgun. The son took his father out, but when only 20 feet from the house, Wood, standing in the doorway, fired and hit the elder Sargent in one leg. No police action has ever been taken.

Fair and Warmer Weather Today

Continuance of the present sample of fair weather was promised today by the weather man with the prospect that today's temperatures would exceed those of yesterday, with its 80-degree maximum.

The thermometer today read 70 degrees at 9 a. m., while the record for this date is 92 degrees, established in 1872.

Quiz Walker on Hidden Million in Deposits

Albany, Aug. 15 (INS)—Mayor James J. Walker, as nonchalant as if about to attend a ball game, was ready today to appear before Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt again this afternoon at the public hearing on charges filed by Samuel Seabury calling for his removal from office.

If "Jimmy" regards the resumption of his tenure on the stand as an ordeal, he doesn't show it. His laughing comment was:

"I'll be there."

The mayor will be asked to explain his relationship with Russell T. Sherwood, missing witness of the Hofstadter legislative inquiry, who, Seabury alleges, was Walker's financial agent.

Seabury charges the mayor caused nearly $1,000,000 to be deposited, including $700,000 in cash, by Sherwood, and [illegible] to give a satisfactory explanation of the source of this money.

Walker stoutly maintains Sherwood was not his financial agent and that he had nothing whatever to do with Sherwood's disappearance.

The mayor's counsel, John J. Curtin, today refused to say whether Walker would call witnesses to corroborate his testimony.

There have been reports that he contemplated summoning a number of witnesses, including the mayor's wife Mrs. Janet Allen Walker; Edward Stanton, his former secretary, and Paul Block, newspaper publisher who opened a joint stock trading account from which the mayor derived $246,000 in profits.

Walker on the stand Friday testified it was strictly a private transaction between himself and Block, his close friend, and nothing whatever to do with "James J. Walker, the mayor."

Gov. Roosevelt has announced he will not make any decision in the Walker case pending court action. The governor is scheduled to make a speech in Columbus, Ohio, next Saturday. It is believed he hopes to get the hearing over before the trip to Ohio.

The mayor's attorney, Curtin, has indicated by the numerous objections he has made at the hearing that he will launch a court battle to prevent the ousting of Walker and if necessary carry it to the United States Supreme Court.

Roxbury Man Badly Hurt in Collision

North Raynham, Aug. 15 (AP)—Harry L. Boyer, 28, of Roxbury was seriously injured, and four other persons hurt as two automobiles were in collision today. Boyer, driving alone, sustained a fractured right knee, a broken right hand and numerous cuts. He was taken to the Morton hospital in Taunton.

Sabino Martin of the other car, and his three companions were treated at the hospital, but released.

NEW ADVANCE IN WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 15 (AP)—The advance in the stock market was quietly resumed in the early trading today, after the sharp setback in the last half of last week.

Trading was in the smallest volume in several days, but prices came up rather sharply during the first half hour, with rails conspicuously in the lead.

Dry Agents Arrest Man on Whiskey St.

St. Paul, Aug. 15 (AP)—Federal prohibition agents will ask the court to decide what's in a name; to be specific, this name:

MAN IS KILLED BY TUBE TRAIN

A man about 60 years old, carrying in his pocket a notebook with the name J. M. Quinn, 31 Fletcher st., Roslindale, plunged to his death today beneath the wheels of a Dorchester-Cambridge tunnel train in Washington st.-under.

Two cars of the train passed over the body, severing both legs, and traffic on the Cambridge-bound side of the tunnel was delayed for 15 minutes.

According to Elevated officials, a woman standing on the platform, where there were few passengers waiting, saw a man walking up and down about 15 feet from where the train enters to the platform. The operator of the train said the man dived into the pit as the train dived into the station.

The body was removed by Elevated officials and police and taken to the N. Grove st. morgue.

The man was five feet six inches tall, weighed 140 pounds and wore a blue suit and blue and white shirt.

In addition to the notebook found in the clothing, there was a paper on which was written:

"Friend—George Higgins, electrician, City Hall."

Cab Driver Held for Robbing Fare

Charged with beating and robbing an elderly passenger in his taxicab, and then robbing him of $250, Oscar Paquette, 32, of Wellington st., Fall River, was held in $5000 for the grand jury today when arraigned in Dedham Court.

Texas Deputy Sheriff Kidnaped and Slain

El Paso, Tex., Aug. 15 (AP)—A report the decapitated body of Deputy Sheriff Joe Johns of Carlsbad, N. M., had been found near Guadalupe peak, 90 miles northeast of El Paso, was received by officers here today.

Johns was believed to have been kidnaped by two men and a woman at a farm where he had gone to investigate an auto theft.

FOLEY FREES TRAMP GIRL OVER HEAD OF COURT

Nol Prosses Dime Theft After She Serves in Jail With Criminals; Cash Sent

"Dorothy Adams," the 22-year-old girl held in jail since Aug. 2 for larceny of 10 cents' worth of adhesive tape, was freed today when Dist. Atty. William J. Foley took the case away from the court and nol prossed the charge.

She was released from Charles st. Jail, where she has been held in $1000 bail since last Friday following a second continuation of the case by Judge Charles L. Carr.

Inspectors James Concannon and Martin Conroy, from the district attorney's office, gave her money with which to go to her home, the location of which she has steadfastly refused to reveal because she did not wish to make her mother ashamed.

"PUNISHED ENOUGH"

The nolle prossing of the case while it was still awaiting disposition in the lower court was unusual on the part of the district attorney.

Foley said he believed the girl had been sufficiently punished and that if she had been sentenced by Judge Carr and appealed, he would have nolle prossed the charge anyway.

"The defendant was arrested on Aug. 2, charged with larceny of 10 cents worth of adhesive tape," he said. "On Aug. 3, she pleaded guilty and her case was continued until Aug. 12, for disposition and she was held in $300 bail.

"On August 12 bail was increased to $1000 and the case was again continued, this time until Aug. 22.

TREATED LIKE CRIMINAL

"At the time of her arrest, the defendant was finger-printed and photographed. No record can be found against her. She has been at all times awaiting disposition of the case.

"We are here dealing with a first offender charged with a larceny of 10 cents. This case would not come to superior court unless an appeal was taken from the disposition of the lower court and the papers would not reach me until the first Monday in September.

"She has been in jail now about two weeks. Were she to remain there until Aug. 22 she would have served nearly three weeks awaiting disposition of a 10-cent larceny charge.

"This is a case which, of course, I would nolle pros if papers arrived here in September. She has no chance to secure the bail set by the lower court.

MONEY SENT HER

"Therefore, I have this day sent for the papers, because I believe she has suffered sufficiently, and the desire to record the fact that the Commonwealth no fur-

RECEIVERS URGED FOR CITIES THAT MUST BORROW

STATE LOANS ARE SCORED AS PERIL

Research Bureau Points to the Danger Unless Boston Radically Cuts Its Expenses

Another attack on the request of the Mayors' Club of Massachusetts for loans of $15,000,000 from the state for welfare expenditures was made today by the Boston Municipal Research Bureau.

The bureau deplored the proposal that Boston and other cities should meet current demands with borrowed money, and said that wherever the state has to aid, a receivership should be declared and a state finance commission placed on full control.

"City officials still follow the easy lure of borrowing money to avoid the stern work of cutting Boston's daily expenses," the statement issued by the bureau says.

EXPENSES MOUNTING

"Pointing to the vastly increased current cost of public relief work, City Hall pleads that this burden can best be lightened by allowing Boston a share in the $15,000,000 State bond issue asked by the Mayors' Club.

"That argument would have force only if Boston's ordinary expenses of government had already been reduced to a basis of economy honestly suited to the force of the present emergency.

"While the cost of the public welfare department has risen from less than $3,000,000 in normal times to a present annual outlay of more than $12,000,000, the reductions thus far accomplished in the ordinary expenses of other city departments are relatively slight.

DANGER IN BORROWING

"With the ordinary budgets still moving on this upward course, it is not merely misleading but gravely dangerous to talk of lightening Boston's burden by borrowing money for the heavy current costs of the public welfare department.

"Though City Hall constantly refers to this cost as an extraordinary charge, and does so with justice, one thing is certain: Neither in 1932, nor yet in 1933, will Boston see the end of it.

"Such pyramiding of charges—both for the extraordinary continuing costs of humanitarian relief enforced by the most severe depression in modern history and for the ordinary costs of a municipal government still operating almost as though the depression had never occurred—is all the more perilous in view of the shaky foundation on which Boston's whole present schedule of assessed valuation now rests."

Members of the board of directors of the research bureau include Bentley W. Warren, William Dexter, William A. Parker, Francis R. Bangs, George E. Cabot, Russell S. Codman, George L. DeBlois, Francis C. Gry, Henry L. Shattuck, Charles W. Whittier.

"These reductions have largely resulted from temporary postponement of some expenditures for repairs, equipment and maintenance of city property, and from taking advantage of lower commodity prices."

HOOVER LAUDS PRELATE'S LIFE

Washington, Aug. 15 (US) — Cardinal Gibbons was eulogized as a great American and a great churchman by President Hoover in accepting on behalf of the nation a statute of the prelate from the Knights of Columbus.

Standing under a broiling sun, before massed thousands assembling for the unveiling exercises incident to the Golden Jubilee Convention of the Knights of Columbus, the President said:

"Cardinal Gibbons was always proud of his American birth and of his American citizenship. He was a patriot, proud of his country, zealous in his support of its democratic institutions.

"The impression he made on the country was of the power that gentleness, kindness and homely wisdom can have, not only to shape one's personal life, but also to influence the larger affairs of the community and the nation.

"Cardinal Gibbons carried his religion into the daily toil and complexities of life. He bore an active part in all the public concerns of his place and time. Movements for social betterment found in him an unfailing friend and practical counsellor."

The statue was dedicated in solemn ceremonies, with all the dignitaries of the Catholic hierarchy and laity in attendance.

BOYCOTT VOTED BY IRISH GROUP

New York Aug. 15—A resolution calling for automobile parades in every important city of the United States next Saturday to promote a boycott of British goods and British shipping and insurance companies was approved here by the Irish race convention.

About 700 adherents of the De Valera Irish Free State government voted unanimously in favor of the resolution, and others to provide picketing of stores, listing of English enterprises in this country and financing of the campaign.

Another resolution denounced the St. Lawrence waterway treaty as "injurious to American interests and surrendering American rights," and the convention urged the United States to reject it.

The imperial conference in Ottawa, John F. Finerty, Washington, D. C., lawyer, said, "is telling America how much she can export to England and to her dominions."

In another address, John J. Douglass, Massachusetts delegate, declared England today has the largest fleet in the world "in spite of a treaty which was supposed to give United States parity."

FATAL MISHAP AFFECTS MIND

Cleveland, Aug. 15—A youthful psychopathic patient in City Hospital was in a state of delirium today following an accident that caused the death of a fellow-patient, William Chase, 26.

The shock caused by the death of Chase so unbalanced the boy mentally that physicians said it was doubtful if he would recover his reason. They withheld his name, although police held him blameless.

Chase, who was said to have relatives in Boston, had entered the hospital voluntarily June 7. He was a spectator at an athletic meet in which patients about to be released as cured participated.

Near the end of the meet the 15-year-old patient, a husky youth, threw a javelin. The spear struck Chase behind the ear and he died of a fractured skull, without regaining consciousness.

G. O. P. Spurts With Race Over

—By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER—

Looks like we can depend on Republican prosperity during the last three months of every administration.

Wall Street is again blowing bubbles at the ceiling.

Stocks are bouncing like a sailor on hossback. But the only whisker in the oleomargarine is that we had to wait three years and nine months for it.

This gives the G. O. P. an average of three healthy months and 45 sick ones out of 48.

We are asking baseball fans if a combined batting and fielding average of .187 is going to keep anybody in the big leagues?

The answer is no in all the live and dead languages. And we are a little prematurely generous when we concede the three healthy months. We'll give 'em August but we still have September and October to go.

If the G. O. P. proves that it can boost the market it makes us wonder why they didn't rush the pulmotor along in 1929. There's something rotten in Denmark and it ain't an egg.

FRANCE KEEPS 'POWDER DRY'

Metz, France, Aug. 15 (AP)—France hopes for peace, but will keep her powder dry, according to Premier Herriot, who, in announcing the policy, referred to the acceptance speech of President Hoover and to Secretary Stimson's recent address on the Kellogg-Briand act.

The premier's declaration was made yesterday in an address here at the opening of the Moselle canal.

"We hear the voices of friends who assure us that war has been forever abolished," he said.

"Despite the most solemn agreements, despite the Briand-Kellogg pact on which Secretary Stimson recently commented in such elevated terms, we see also appeals to violence and eulogies of war which we should be able to believe had been stilled forever."

Federal Men Hunt Taunton "Agents"

Taunton, Aug. 15—Clues to the identity of the "fake" prohibition agents, who shook down the proprietor of a local home brew dispensary for $100, have been obtained by Department of Justice investigators, it was learned today.

The fake agents told the beer joint owner that they would raid him unless he paid the money, as they already had a search warrant.

FOLEY FREES TRAMP GIRL

ther will prosecute this complaint."

He would not reveal the source of the money turned over to the girl.

Before he took his action, one thin dime, upon the face of which Miss Liberty wore a slightly sardonic grin, had been delivered to the county.

It was sent, anonymously, to Chief Probation Officer Albert J. Sargent in restitution for the 10-cent roll of adhesive tape.

Whether it will be turned over to the downtown store from which the girl took the 10 yards of tape to bind her sore foot could not be learned.

YOUTH WITH A DIME.

A well-dressed young man, about 20, apeared at the courthouse pressroom today and inquired for the whereabouts of Sargent. He was smiling and he carried an envelope addressed to the probation officer.

When reporters asked him what it contained, he said it was a 10-cent piece, sent by his employer, a Boston business man, in restitution for the 10-cent larceny.

"You see," said he, "it has the likeness of Miss Liberty, a symbol of freedom, and an olive branch, symbol of peace."

"Well, well," said the reporters.

"And," continued the visitor, "it also has the fasces bound around the axe. The old Roman lictors used to carry these as a symbol of authority."

GAVE SECRET NAME

"Well, well, well;" said the reporters.

Under pressure last Friday the girl gave probation officers a name and address which she said were hers after having previously refused to reveal her real identity because she did not want her mother to be ashamed of her.

This name and address, which has not been revealed, has not yet been checked, the probation office reports, and the identity of the girl who claims to be a college graduate, is still a mystery.

NEW WOOL RISE COMING FROM HEAVY BUYING

Almost 45,000,000 Pounds Sold in Boston During the Past Two Weeks

Further advances in wool prices were looked for today as a result of the rising market in which in the past two weeks 40,000,000 to 45,000,000 pounds were sold.

These sales equalled 10 per cent of a year's consumption at the rate of 1928-29, and a subsequent shortage of domestic wool is expected.

Buying has been heavy, coming from many scattered interests, with big manufacturers in the market for future as well as immediate needs.

ADVANCES GENERAL

According to reports the American Woolen Co., alone has bought or authorized the purchase of 15,000,000 pounds of wool.

Price advances have been general with territory wools up two to three cents a pound and half-bloods a like amount on actual sales. Asking prices have advanced as much as five cents a pound in the case of some firms forced virtually to withdraw from the market because of the great activity of the past fortnight and delay in grading wools.

Growers, it is reported, are showing much greater determination to get better prices, especially in Texas and Montana, and have advanced asking prices two or three cents a pound on a grease basis.

WARNS OF SHORTAGE

According to the Boston Wool Trade Association, better business and advanced prices are an actuality today. Predicting a shortage of domestic wool the association warned its members:

"A runaway market is not desirable, but may be unavoidable if the hand-to-mouth buying policy is as closely conducted as it has been during the past two years."

PAIR BATTLE WITH KNIVES

Frank Romano, 35, of Wall st., West End, and Salvatore Saia, 36, of Brighton st., West End, were arrested and charged with assault with intent to kill each other after the police broke up a duel with knives in front of Saia's home.

The clash of steel on steel and the cries of the combatants drew a large crowd and threw the section into turmoil.

Patrolmen Thomas F. Hassey, Elmer J. Cuddy and William J. Merrick of the Joy st. police station broke up the battle, disarmed the combatants and arrested them. After the duelists were treated for minor cuts at the Haymarket Relief Hospital they were locked up.

The police were told that Saia made a remark to Romano's wife as the couple passed his house.

In Court

WOMEN FLIERS PASS 25TH HOUR

Valley Stream, N. Y., Aug. 15 (AP)—Mrs. Frances Marsalis and Mrs. Louise Thaden passed the breakfast hazard today and flew on into a realm of heightened nope.

Last week the young matrons began an assault on the women's refueling flight endurance record of 122 hours, but were brought down after a night aloft when a breakfast bucket lowered from their refueling ship ripped wing fabric.

They went up again at 1 p. m. eastern standard time yesterday. This morning they refuelled in the air and then succeeded in grabbing the coffee pail before it did any damage.

The first attempt lasted only about 17 hours but at noon today the women had been in the air for 25 hours and the way seemed clear for another day of calm sailing.

SEE THE BOSS, SAYS GARNER AS HE SPRINTS

Speaker Spends a Night With Roosevelt Talking Over Plans for Campaign

Albany, Aug. 15 (INS)—"You'll have to see the boss about that," Speaker John N. Garner called over his shoulder as he sprinted through the Union Station today to catch a train for New York.

The Texan had just come from the executive mansion where he spent the night with Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, discussing presidential campaign plans. He was asked what part he would play in the campaign, but he was so busy running for the train that he referred the interviewer to his "boss"—Gov. Roosevelt.

"Franklin Roosevelt will make a great President," Speaker Garner shouted as he swung himself aboard the moving train.

Speaker Garner was scheduled to confer in New York later today with James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee. He will then go to Washington to clean up some personal business.

It is understood Garner will return to his home in Texas for another brief rest before plunging in to the campaign.

Chicago, Aug. 15 (AP)—William Woodcock, 43, of Bridgeport, Ct., a circus employe, was crushed to death when he fell under the wheels of a wagon.

DEATH TOLL 17 IN TEXAS GALE

Houston, Tex., Aug. 15—The toll today had climbed to 17 dead and 50 injured, with property damage of thousands, in a tropical storm that swept South Texas Saturday night.

The list of dead and injured was expected to mount. Rescue workers moved into the stricken area, which centered about this city with a radius of 75 or 100 miles.

The storm raged for many hours, the wind attaining a velocity of about 70 miles.

Houston, where three persons were killed and property damage estimated at $1,000,000 was done by a hurricane in 1915, was caught in the center of the disturbance.

Almost all the victims were residents of farming communities and small cities near the Gulf of Mexico.

Bill Aims to Cut Legislators' Pay

Rep. Ralph E. Otis, of Pittsfield, prime mover three years ago in the increase of legislatve pay from $1500 to $2000, today filed a bill for a reduction in pay of senators and representatives.

Otis is from the third Berkshire district, where 12 Republicans and 14 Democrats filed papers for three seats in the House. He is a Republican.

Condition of Peters' Son Is Improved

The condition of John Peters, 17, son of ex-Mayor and Mrs. Andrew J. Peters of Boston, was so good at Phillips House, Massachusetts General Hospital, early today, that the doctors were reported "pleased." The youth was taken ill while summering near Rockland, Me., with his mother. He was brought to Boston by airplane Saturday.

Fr. Cox's "Blue Shirts" Push on for St. Louis

Columbus, O., Aug. 15 (AP)—Five hundred strong, the "Blue Shirt" army of the Rev. James R. Cox, Pittsburgh priest and jobless party candidate for President, broke camp in Reynoldsburg, east of here, this morning and rolled west through Ohio en route to the jobless-liberty convention assembling in St. Louis.

Father Cox

The motorcade, consisting of some 200 automobiles and trucks, bearing men, women, children and supplies, halted near Reynoldsburg late yesterday and pitched camp a mile east of the town along the national highway. The "army" left Pittsburgh yesterday morning.

DRY FORCES TO BACK HOOVER

Washington, Aug. 15 (US)—Despite opposition to the Republican prohibition resubmission plan and President Hoover's interpretation of it, the executive committee of the Dry Allied forces will support Hoover's candidacy for re-election.

This was announced by Dr. Daniel A. Poling, chairman of the allied forces, which he claims is the largest dry organization, with a membership of 1,500,000.

Poling took the position of other professional Drys—that Mr. Hoover's proposed change in constitutional prohibition is the "lesser of two evils." He said:

"Our endorsement of President Hoover is based upon the belief that, in contrast with Governor Roosevelt, his election will safeguard the gains made under prohibition, will move towards the elimination of existing evils resulting from non-observance and non-enforcement in some communities, will prevent naked repeal and the return of the saloon system."

Poling said the Allied Forces will conduct a campaign for senators and representatives of both parties who are opposed to repeal.

ROSAMOND PINCHOT TO DIVORCE W. A. GASTON

NOTABLES IN BATTLE WITH APE ON SPREE

12 STATIONS HERE WILL STUDY ECLIPSE OF SUN

Bound for Reno

Mrs. William A. Gaston, the former Rosamond Pinchot, niece of the governor of Pennsylvania, who won stage fame as the nun in "The Miracle," is on her way to Reno to divorce her husband, a Boston attorney and grandson of William Gaston.

SOCIETY STAGE STAR SEEKING RENO DECREE

Wreck of Boston Attorney's Second Romance Bared by Wife's Trip West

The married life of William A. Gaston, son of the late Col. William A. Gaston, of Boston, and the former Rosamond Pinchot, niece of Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, is about to end.

It became known today that Mrs. Gaston is on her way to Reno, where, her friends say, she will obtain a divorce.

HUSBAND'S SECOND

Society received a surprise four years ago when Gaston and Miss Pinchot, who played the Nun in "The Miracle" and major parts in other theatrical offerings, slipped away and were quietly married in Westchester, Pa.

They were accompanied only by Amos Pinchot, father of the bride, and the bridegroom's mother. With the marriage came the additional surprise that Gaston had been married before and divorced on grounds of desertion and incompatability.

It is not known what disposition will be made of the custody of Gaston's son, William, Jr., now three years old.

LEADER IN SOCIETY

The former Miss Pinchot, a brilliant figure in Philadelphia's social set before her marriage, interchanged roles with Lady Diana Manners in "The Miracle." In addition she had a prominent part in "Henry IV," with John Drew and Otis Skinner. She is 27 years old.

Aside from being an accomplished actress she is a clever acrobat, a swimmer and a horsewoman.

HARVARD GRADUATE

Gaston, who was graduated from Harvard in 1923, has worked on a Boston newspaper, held the office of assistant district attorney of Suffolk County and tried his hand at playwriting and acting. He wrote a satirical play, "Second Best," in which he acted and which was produced at Provincetown.

During the war he served in the U. S. Naval Reserve Flying Corps and was awarded a navy cross for distinguished service overseas.

His grandfather, William Gaston, was mayor of Boston and governor of Massachusetts. He is 34 years old.

LANCASTER TO HEAR FATE SOON

Miami, Fla., Aug. 15 (INS)—With but two important witnesses remaining to be heard, one on each side, taking of testimony in the trial of Capt. William N. Lancaster on the charge he murdered Haden Clarke neared a close today.

In rebuttal today the witness who might turn out to be the state's trump card was Mrs. Ida Clyde Clarke, mother of the slain youth.

She has told State's Attorney Hawthorne that Lancaster, when released from custody, after three days of investigation, came to her apartment and said: "Sometimes I think I killed Haden."

Chief Defense Counsel James M. Carson is ready to show that Mrs. Clarke told reporters that she "would not be surprised if she received a spirit message from Haden," and otherwise to build up the contention that Mrs. Clarke was strongly inclined toward spiritualism.

Capt. Joseph Ince, the "missing mystery witness" of the defense, has arrived here from Detroit and is ready to testify that Lancaster never threatened the life of Clarke in his hearing.

CENTENARIAN TO GIVE RECITAL

Corinth, Vt., Aug. 15 (AP)—George Astbury's violin was in readiness and his tenor voice all primed for tonight. Today is his 100th birthday and while he spent the day at the home of his granddaughter, Mrs. Dennis Murphy, receiving friends, the big event comes off tonight at the West Fairlee Town Hall.

At a celebration in his honor at the Town Hall Astbury is going to play a few violin selections and give a tenor solo while an orchestra made up of five grandchildren will play for him. In the audience will be two daughters, a son, 13 grandchildren 15 great-grandchildren and five great-great-grand children.

The applause will be pleasant to Astbury's ears as he will be unable t osee his uadience. He has been blind 15 years.

Stuttering Actors Arouse Criticism

New York, Aug. 15 (AP)—Actors stuttering to produce a passing laugh may make stutterers out of high-strung, imitative children, says James Sonnett Greene, director of the hospital for speech disorders.

Not only that but they inflict humiliation, fear and shame on those already suffering from the defect.

Orangemen to Fight Irish With Noise

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Aug. 15 (AP)—Orangemen garrisoned their hall at Caledon, on the Armagh-Tyrone border, all night last night to prevent a Hibernian demonstration in the village today. The method used will be to drown out the Hibernians by holding a series of competitions on great Orange drums.

Composer Strauss Wins Music Medal

Munich, Bavaria, Aug. 15 (AP)—The new medal of the New York College of Music was presented to Richard Strauss today by Carl Hein, a director of the college.

The medal was awarded to the composer as the musician meriting the greatest international recognition.

Maurice Chevalier, movie hero, proved his prowess in real life by taking part in the capture of the ape, which invaded the tennis courts at Cannes after escaping from its keeper. The ape bombarded the stand with bottles and stones until it was recaptured.

Roszika Dolly, of the internationally known Dolly sisters, dancers, was injured also by the ape. A number of American and European blue-bloods were mauled before the beast was overpowered in a mass attack by the men.

Gangster Slain

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 15 (US)—Tentatively identified as Joe Angelo, reputed gangster, a body was found near Glenwood, Ia., with 10 bullet holes.

ENRAGED APE ROUTS SOCIETY

Cannes, France, Aug. 15 (US)—An enraged ape ,out to "do" the Riviera, invaded the fashionable tennis courts here, introducing himself to international society with a set of sharp flashing teeth and arms of prodigious strength.

Before the flurried society folk, with the aid of Cannes' puffing fire department, had trussed the animal up, he bit or scratched a number of those bearing names famous on both sides of the Atlantic.

Among those slightly injured was the much married Peggy Joyce, Roszika Dolly, of the famous dancing sisters, Lady Cunningham Reid, and Princess Sherbatoff.

James Gittings, Philadelphia social registerite, who, with Maurice Chevalier, Lord Charles Cavendish, husband of New York's dancing Adele Astaire, and Maurice de Kobra, led firemen to the assault, was the most seriously hurt. He was scratched and bitten, but is in no danger.

The ape broke away from a gypsy camp near Cannes and shuffled onto the courts while a tournament was on.

Pigeon Steals Ride to Concord, N. H., on B. & M. Train

Concord, N. H., Aug. 15 (AP)—A white pigeon which was carried into Concord in the headlight of a locomotive was being treated today at the homз of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Foote in Bow Hills. When a train from Boston reached Concord, the bird, unconscious, was found inside the headlight. The pigeon bore a band with the numbers AJ-27-A 1872.

EQUIPPED WITH FUNDS GIVEN BY HARVARD

Government Experts to Record Effect on the Weather Produced During Shadow

Twelve stations within the shadow path of the total eclipse of the sun, scheduled for Aug. 31, will be specially equipped to record and study the eclipse phases in this area, with funds from the Milton fund of Harvard, it was announced today by G. A. Loveland, chief meteorologist in Boston.

Circumstances are so favorable according to Forecaster Loveland that the Blue Hill observatory has undertaken collection and analysis of data in considerable detail.

"The total eclipse of the sun will afford a rare opportunity to note the immediate effect of an eclipse on the weather," said Forecaster Loveland.

"The sunlight will be shut away from the earth for a brief interval, and during that time the atmosphere will cool and contract. Certain breezes will be set up in consequence of the changes in density and pressure. The relative humidity will increase and any sheet clouds that may be present are likely to thicken or become more extensive.

WEAKEN STORMS

"The daytime convectional circulation that makes cumulus clouds and afternoon thundershowers will be week-end, perhaps to a point where such clouds or showers will disappear.

"The eclipse will provide a nicely controlled rapid reduction and increase in sunshine at a time when the cumulative effects of daytime sunshine are nominally at a maximum.

"Th Blu Hill Obsrvatory of Harvard University, with the cooperation of the Weather Bureau and numerous volunteer observers will attempt to make an intensive study of the weather changes.

ASKS HELPERS

"Equipment to record on an open scale the changes in temperature, humidity, pressure, and wind velocity and direction, is now being assembled at Blue Hill Observatory for a dozen stations, and non-recording apparatus, chiefly thermometers, wind-valves nephoscopes will be supplied to many others.

"Co-operative observers of the Weather Bureau who would like to make special observations during the afternoon of August 31, especially those who would be interested in operating one of the recording stations, are invited to write to the Blue Hill Observatory, Milton, Mass.

Mrs. Dorothea McDonnell, socially prominent divorcee, found that life was not worth living without her wealthy young husband, Francis R. McDonnell, from whom she was divorced, and committed suicide in her richly furnished 51st street apartment in New York.

MRS. M'CORMICK CHEERED BY KIN

Chicago, Aug. 15 (INS)—Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, lying seriously ill, looked forward eagerly today to a complete reunion with all her children and her former husband, Harold F. McCormick.

The family gathering—the first in many years—was expected to take place when Mrs. McCormick's younger daughter, Mrs. Mathilde Oser, reaches her mother's bedside after a hurried journey from her home in Switzerland.

It was reporte dthat Mrs. McCormick's brother, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., may accompany Mrs. Oser on the last stage of her trip from New York to Chicago. Mrs. Oser is scheduled to arrive in New York aboard the liner Majestic tomorrow, and it was held likely she will make the rest of the journey by airplane.

Already near their mother's bedside are Mrs. McCormick's other two children, Mrs. Muriel Hubbard and Fowler McCormick. Her former husband has visited her twice since hurrying back to Chicago from Los Angeles, where he had been attending the Olympic games.

R. I. RUM RING SOLICITED FOR G. O. P. FUNDS

By THE MASKED REPORTER

Copyright, 1932, by Boston Evening American. All Rights Reserved.

Providence, Aug. 15—Rum-runners, speakeasy owners, cutting plant operators, still bosses and just plain booties are being solicited for funds to carry on the Republican campaign in this State and they are coming across nobly—for a consideration.

The consideration being that Chief Officer Mike O'Brien and his four assistants in the Rhode Island dry office be eased out of the area in which they have recently raised havoc with the boys in the rum racket.

Masked Reporter

In addition to learning that this plot was laid only two weeks ago and the collectors are already on the job, I found that "the works are in" for O'Brien and his loyal mates. They're going to be farmed out—possibly before election, but certainly afterward—according to the promises of the solicitors.

Perhaps you've had some previous inkling of the dry agent situation in Rhode Island. If you haven't I can tell you that until O'Brien was placed in charge of the raiders it reeked with corruption, graft and crime that included hi-jacking by the notorious Alvah Richardson, one-time chief raiding officer of the state, who was finally kicked out "for the good of the service."

Alvah's "drag" with the leading Republican politicians of this state carried him through many a jam chief of which was the phony raid on the Horatio Hart farm in Adamsville in which Alvah led what was supposed to be a squad of his dry agents on Herbie Cavaca's tremendous stores of liquor.

RAIDERS ROUTED

Cavaca was ready to give up without a struggle when he suddenly got a glimpse of Alvah's "agents"—a dozen of them. It looked like a Rogue's Gallery collection of muderous hi-jackers.

But was Cavaca non-plussed? Ah, no. He shouted an order and Alvah hustled his huge bulk off the farm far in the van of his fleeing "agents." There was considerable shooting that night, but Alvah never stopped to make a seizure nor an arrest.

It was too raw to be covered up, however. Cavaca, shot through the arm, was arrested for driving Richardson's hi-jackers off his property. Several of the fake agents, including Jack Campbell, are now resting easy in Atlanta, but Alvah went back on the job.

True, they sent him to the Vermont office but that was only for a little while, until the affair blew over. John D. Morrell, then prohibition administrator of Rhode Island, said Alvah was a victim of circumstances, so he was brought back to his old stamping grounds a few months later.

Things began to get hot again in the summer of 1931.

FIRED BY WOODCOCK

It might have gone on forever like that if the two rookie agents, Robert Bowlin and Howard Roberts, hadn't got hungry for more and more. They started doing a little hi-jacking on their own, seizing liquor from the very mobs that were paying them to "lay off."

When the time for the pair to tell the why and wherefore to the Rev. Jonathan Lewis, New England administrator, Agents Bowlin and Roberts had adjourned to parts unknown.

But Alvah stayed on and presented an eloquent defense. It seems the whole world had Alvah wrong. The Republican bosses rushed to his aid again but Amos Woodcock, head of all the country's dry agents, came on from Washington to look into the thing and decided that Alvah had gone far enough. He was fired.

His immediate superior, John D. Morrell, was sent to Indiana, a sort of Class B league for dry agents, but I should tell you at this point that the same sort of works are already in for Morell to step back to the big show in Rhode Island.

In tomorrow's Boston Evening American the Masked Reporter will write of the strange workings of the "racket guys" in Rhode Island and Cape Cod. He will tell of their relations with police and other officials whose sworn duty it is to uphold the laws of the country and how the "bag" is applied.

Lost 20 Lbs. of Fat In Just 4 Weeks

Mrs. Mae West of St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I'm only 28 yrs. old and weighed 170 lbs. until taking one box of your Kruschen Salts just 4 weeks ago. I now weigh 150 lbs. I also have more energy and furthermore I've never had a hungry moment."

Fat folks should take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—cut down on pastry and fatty meats—go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar—it's the SAFE, harmless way to reduce as tens of thousands of men and women know.

For your health's sake ask for and get Kruschen at any drug store—the cost for a bottle that lasts 4 weeks is but a trifle and if after the first bottle you are not joyfully satisfied with results—money back.

THREATS WILL NOT STOP MASKED REPORTER EXPOSE

Several persons have communicated with this newspaper, directly or through third parties, making various threats against the Masked Reporter for his activities in exposing the rum racket and official slackness, or worse, in New Bedford, Fall River, Providence and throughout the Cape area.

These threats are foolish, of course. The Masked Reporter himself and his ways of getting information are beyond the reach of petty officials and racketeers, so he cannot be stopped in his expose in this fashion. He has been threatened by experts, and, besides, his identity is so covered that he cannot be reached personally either for offers of bribes, or threats.

The fact is, of course, that much of the information already revealed, and about to be revealed, is available to any newspaper or to any official in the area who does not deliberately close the eyes and ears to what is openly going on about them.

Denials by local officials in the various towns and cities affected are to be expected, and their haste to rush into print on a plea of "don't hurt our home town" naturally isn't taken seriously by those in the know.

The Boston Evening American and the Masked Reporter will continue to print the facts as they find them, threats and denials notwithstanding. Other proof, plenty of it for every statement that has been made, or that will be made.

Yes, and for the benefit of those persons who are threatening newspaper reporters of the several papers in the several towns affected, it can be said that no information has been obtained from them.

PHONE IN FRAUD TIPS

Figures from 15 of the 19 stations reveal a total of 14 per cent of the 573 cases investigated are frauds.

A warrant charging fraud has been issued for a Seventh st., South Boston, resident.

The revelation of another case where aid was being received in the name of a dead man was also made in East Boston. This is the second fraud of this type, another being disclosed in the West End Saturday.

Jamaica Plain furnished the largest percentage of frauds in the checkup. Fifteen out of 30 cases invested, or 50 per cent, were frauds, according to police.

HOME OWNERS AIDED

In five of these cases wrong addresses were given, several others were home owners and others owned autos.

Mattapan, East Boston, Hyde Park and the South End also revealed frauds. More than a dozen of 28 cases in Mattapan showed illegal securing of aid.

In East Boston 24 out of 68 cases appeared to be frauds. Police found a man receiving aid whose mother owned several houses and whose sister drove an auto. The man is said to have declared he was too proud to ask help from his relatives.

WRONG ADDRESSES

In Hyde Park, a man who moved to Randolph two years ago is still receiving city aid. In Brighton the case of a woman working, while her husband received aid, was uncovered. In the South End police found more than a dozen cases where wrong addresses were given by aid recipients.

Milk st., West Roxbury, and the Back Bay stations reported no frauds. The City sq. station reported two suspicious cases.

EIGHT KILLED IN WEEK-END CRASHES

Eight persons are dead today, the victims of week-end auto accidents in New England.

THE DEAD

MONTROSE, Dorothy, 11, of Cambridge st., Allston.

BERLANGER, Philip, 30, of Stone st., Beverly.

TOMKIEWICZ, Stanislaw, 50, of Bayonne, N. J.

CARTER, Mrs. Jane G., 94, of Alfreton rd., Needham.

The Montrose girl and Mrs. Morrison were killed yesterday in a crash of three machines, in which nine other persons were injured, at Bass Hill curve, North Andover. They were passengers in an auto operated by Alfred Morrison, husband of the dead woman, in which Mrs. Dora Montrose's grandmother of the girl, was riding.

Morrison's machine was in collision with a car operated by John Medaglia of Alton ave., Bradford, and overturned. A machine driven by Walter H. Pillsbury of Salem st., Bradford, then crashed into the wreackage of Morrison's car.

Kiley died of injuries received in a crash with the auto driven by Nubas Karakashian of Philadelphia at Elm and Woodland sts., Methuen. Mary and Dorothy Sullivan of Parker st., Lowell, escaped with slight injuries. Seven persons in the other car were unhurt.

JUMP FROM CRADLE TO FAME IN FILMS

WONDER CHILD OF SCREEN

CLEAR HORNSBY OF GAMBLING

Chicago, Aug. 15 (INS)—Despite disclosures unearthed in the St Louis hearing conducted by Commissioner K. M. Landis, President William L. Veeck of the Chicago Cubs today reiterated that Rogers Hornsby was removed from the team managership because of the club president's opinion that he was not handling the players properly.

"We let Hornsby go for only one reason, as I have said," Veeck declared, "if anyone wants to print another story, he can go ahead. But he will not be reporting the truth."

Veeck said he had no evidence that Hornsby ever placed a bet on a horse race. He also denied that any alleged "rubber" check written by Hornsby ever was brought to him, Veeck, for collection.

JAIL FUGITIVE SHOT IN MAINE

Loren Roberts, escaped Negro convict, woh was sought unsuccessfully for two days in the woods along the Newmuryport turnpike, was shot and probably fatally wounded today at Millbridge, near Ellsworth, Me.

On a tip that he was living at a house in Millbridge, Sheriff James A. Cummings and Deputy Sheriff Julius White, lay in wait for him for several hours.

As Roberts approached the house the sheriff stepped out of hiding. Roberts dropped back, drawing a revolver and Sheriff Cummings opened fire, putting one bullet in the convict's abdomen and another in his head. He was taken to Ellsworth Hospital.

Roberts escaped more than a year ago while being transferred to Maine state prison from the Ellsworth jail.

4 LOST ON RESCUE PLANE

available at Gloucester, but the hazy conditions over the water prevented their aid in the search, according to Camdr. Starr of Eastern Division headquarters.

At the Gloucester base it was revealed that the two planes lack pilots.

Lieut. Walter Anderson, the only pilot assigned there in addition to Lieut. Burk, is on leave of absence in Michigan. Saunders, one of the men aboard the missing plane, could fl yone of the craft, but had no license to fly.

MAN DYING ON BOAT.

A report from one of the destroyers stated that the plane was sighted shortly after midnight, 150 miles southeast of Gloucester.

She was heading toward the last position given by the Natalie Hammond. The weather then was thick and hazy, but the plane apparently was encountering no difficuity, the report said.

Guardsmen on shore kept in close touch by radio in the hope that a report of the plane's progress might reach them, but no further word was received.

Meanwhile, the sailor on the Natalie Hammond, whose identity was not established in the calls for aid, was waging a fight against death from blood poisoning.

His condition was first reported to the crew of the steam trawler Maine, which is equipped with radio.

The Maine relayed the call for aid to the Woods Hole Coast Guard base here and the latter flashed it to Gloucester through eastern division headquarters at the custom house.

After the destroyer Shaw was notified at sea to find the schooner, officials decided upon the flight of the new plane, recently assigned to Gloucester.

GAS FOR 7 HOURS

They weighed the hazards against the possibility of saving a life and decided to send the plane on the first such rescue attempt ever attempted here at night.

The plane had only a six-hour cruising reserve and a gasoline emergency reserve that would keep it in the air an hour longer, officials pointed out as they cited the fear for its safety, and that of the four men aboard.

The plane that made the trip, while of the newer type, is not equipped with guide lights in case of a forced landing in the water.

The four men aboard had but a sketchy idea of the position of the Natalie Hammond, because of the relayed message from the trawler Maine that indicated the Hammond was trying herself to make port.

While coast guard radio operators at the Nahant station tried in vain to communicate with the rescue plane, officers held out the hope that it might have alighted at sea and was riding out the swells until rescuers arrive.

Boy All Right, But His Heart Is in the Wrong Place

Detroit, Aug. 15 (AP)—Johnny Babaia, 15, went to sleep quite suddenly when struck on the head by a batted baseball and woke up in receiving hospital a celebrity.

Physicians had discovered that his heart is on the right instead of the left side and pronounced him, statistically speaking, one person in 100,000. Johnny is normal except for his misplaced heart.

SALES TAX STUDY FOR CONGRESS

Washington, Aug. 15 (INS)—Plans for a thorough study of the manufacturers' sales tax and other possible sources of federal revenue were announced today by Henry I. Harriman, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

The study will be made by a special committee on taxation, he explained. A report will be prepared before Congress meets next December.

Speaking for the Chamber's executive committee, Harriman declared:

"While the executive committee does no take a position with respect to any tax, it is convinced that the manufacturers' sales tax and every other possible remedy suggested for alleviating inequalities should immediately be examined.

"Conclusions should be reached before Congress reassembles in December, and remedial legislation asked."

Hoover Staff Opens N. Y. Headquarters

New York, Aug. 15 (AP)—Eastern headquarters for President Hoover's re-election campaign were formally opened today at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

The staff at present includes U. S. Senator Felix Hebert, of Rhode Island, eastern campaign manager; Representative John Q. Tilson, head of the speakers' bureau; Jeremiah Milbank, eastern treasurer, and George Akerson, former secretary of President Hoover, director of publicity.

TWO CHILDREN STAR IN FILMS

Hollywood, Aug. 15—When you see four-year-old Jacquie Lyn on the screen you may not know it, but you're really watching two actresses.

One, of course, is Jacquie, who has already proved her genius as a trouper. The other is Gauzy Wings.

You won't see Gauzy Wings, actually, for she is, as Jacquie explains earnestly, the good fairy that she keeps in her heart.

Jacquie, with large blue eyes and golden curls, was one of those rare children who are almost forced into movie-acting by directors and producers. She has been something of a prodigy since her birth—in London in September, 1928—according to her mother, Eve Lyn.

Mrs. Lyn and her mother brought Jacquie to America when she was 15 months old, and they soon moved to Los Angeles. Here so many people asked the mother why Jacquie wasn't in films that she decided to try them.

She was the child who appeared with Elissa Landi in "Wicked." After that other studios called for her, and now she is under contract to Hal Roach, a member of his "Our Gang."

George Robert Phillips McFarland known to film fans as "Spanky" is another child prodigy who has gained rapid movie fame. He is three and one-half years old now and has been appearing before the camera since he was a year and one-half old.

Assumption Corps Wins Two Prizes

Meriden, Conn., Aug. 15—The Assumption Corps of Chicopee, Mass., won two prizes in competitive events at the convention of the Connecticut State Fifers and Drummers' Association, it was announced today.

Prizes for best piccolo and flute playing, and fancy drilling went to the Assumption Corps.

Alleged Slayer Is Killed by Police

Natchez, Miss., Aug. 15 (AP)—The slaying of Jane Surget Merrill, Southern belle of other days, is attributed by authorities to a Negro she refused employment.

NEW BUSINESS GAINS SHOWN IN N. E. PLANTS

Reports of chambers of commrce, boards of trade, trade associations and other sources show more speeding up in many lines of New England business, the New England Trade Council has announced.

Textiles were reported increasing output and employing new hands, while shoe manufacturers and others in general lines of manufacture reported better conditions.

Many factories resumed full-time schedules, while others employed more workers.

R. I. MILL ADDS LOOMS

The reports show the Grosvenor Dale Mills, Providence, have put 650 additional looms in production.

The Devonshire Mills, Manchester, N. H., will begin operations September 1, under new management, employing about 150, Commerce reports. The principal industries in Manchester are increasing employment and most shoe factories running at capacity or overtime.

The Stevens Linen Works, Webster, has resumed operations on a full-time basis, with 600 employes. The Tiffany Woolen Mills, Perryville, have resumed operations, employing 175.

The Berkshire Woolen Co., Glaz-Brand Underwear Co., Wyandotte Worsted Co., and Silver Lake Mills, Inc., of Pittsfield, are all operating from 90 per cent to full capacity.

The American Woolen Upper and Lower Mill Skowhegan, Me., have resumed full operations after three months' inactivity.

The Pepperell Mfg. Co., Biddeford Me., will put additional looms into operation.

The Taunton Silks Corp., Taunton, has replaced some of its old machinery, increasing its output 10 per cent and is building up its night force to produce as much as the day force.

The Allied Novelty Shoe Corp., Springvale, Me., has begun operations and expects to employ 200.

LAWRENCE FIRM BUSY

The Milchen Shoe Co., Lawrence, has increased employes from 375 to 425. Business in all shoe manufacturing plants in Lawrence is reported good.

The Chelsea Chamber of Commerce reports "a decided upturn in the shoe industry in Chelsea." About 2300 shoe workers are employed.

The Waltham Watch Co., Waltham, has recalled 850 employes following a month's vacation and shutdown.

The Asinof and Sons Mfg. Co., Chicopee, has started full production with a normal force of 750 workers.

DAY AND NIGHT SHIFTS

The United States Travelware Luggage Co., Fitchburg, which is manufacturing new "Airway" and "Skyway" luggage, reports an increase in business. Day and night shifts are being run.

Crocker, Burbank & Company Assn. is employing 100 men on half time on its Whitmanville storage dam project.

The White-Warner Co., Taunton, manufacturers of ranges, has opened its factory, while the Lowell textile industry shows improvement.

HITLER ALARMS JEWISH MEET

Geneva, Aug. 15 (AP)—Leaders at the first world Jewish Conference here today were considerably concerned over Adolf Hitler, Germany's National Socialist leader, and his campaign of anti-semitism.

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, one of the American delegates, said he believed Schiller and Lessing (who are Jews), more truly expressed the soul of Germany than Hitler and his lieutenant, Joseph Goebbels.

He added he had faith that, despite the present political situation, the more than 500,000 Jews in Germany would not be expelled from the land of Heine, Boerner, Wassermann, Ehrlich, Lasker, Bamberger, Rathenau and Einstein.

Victim of Roxbury Holdup Improves

Matthew Cummings, Jr., shot by holdup men in Roxbury last week, was today reported as "fairly comfortable" at Boston City Hospital.

In the meantime police have been unable to obtain a clue to the identity of the man who shot Cummings. The shooting occurred during what was believed to be an attempt to hold up the office of Matthew Cummings Co., builders, in Whittier st., Roxbury.

Western Educator Commits Suicide

Minneapolis, Aug. 15 (AP)—Death from monoxide gas has ended the career of Dean James C. Lawrence, executive assistant to Dr. Lotus D. Coffman, president of the University of Minnesota. He was in the back seat of an automobile, the motor of which was running. A deputy coroner returned a verdict of suicide.

Weather Halts Flier

Revenge Theory Discarded in Bonus Killer's Death

Washington, Aug. 15 (AP)—Detectives decided early today that chance and nothing else sent George Shinault, 39, policeman slayer of a bonus marcher, to his death.

Shinault, already exonerated by a coroner's jury for shooting William Hushka, Chicago veteran, in the rioting July 28, was cruising about the Capital in a scout car when there came radio orders to go to the third block on F st., Northwest, to stop a fight.

He and Patrolman Ralph B. Edwards went at once. Shinault had been driving but on the previous call he and Edwards changed seats. Consequently, when the police car stopped near the scene of the reported fight, Shinault was first to leap out.

While Edwards shut off the engine and hunted a flashlight, Shinault dashed into the house. Edwards heard two shots and Shinault raced back, kneeling beside the police car and saying:

"Edwards, that fellow's got a gun."

Then he fell over, dead, with two pistol bullet wounds in his chest.

The killing was in a negro neighborhood, a few blocks from where Shinault shot Hushka when veterans, hurling bricks, advanced on him.

Police today sought several negroes for questioning. A number were detained after the shooting.

REDS SEIZED ON OLYMPIC TRACK

Los Angeles, Aug. 15 (AP)—A track team of five men and two women—unlisted as an entry by Olympic games officials—ran for a short time on the track at Olympic stadium during the closing ceremony of the 1932 games yesterday.

They were pursued by police, taken to jail and held on charges of suspicion of criminal syndicalism.

Allegedly members of a communistic organization, the seven leaped from stadium seats to the track, divested themselves of civilian clothes and appeared in track suits on which were emblazoned the words: "Free Tom Mooney."

Mooney is serving a life sentence for his conviction of participation in the San Francisco Preparedness Day bombing of 1916.

20,000 Miners Quit

Moscow, Aug. 15 (AP)—Dissatisfied with low wages and inferior living conditions, between 20,000 and 25,000 miners in the Donbas coalfield have walked out of their jobs in the past two months.

BOY IN LYNN SLAYING FACES AN ALIENIST

Charles W. Carroll, 22, of Lynn, who is believed by the authorities to be insane, smiled placidly today when asked to plead guilty or not guilty in Lynn district court to the charge of murding his foster grandmother.

A plea of not guilty was entered for him by Judge Reeves and the youth was taken to Salem jail to await examination by State alienists.

In asking two weeks' continuance, which was granted, Asst. Dist. Atty. Charles A. Green said:

"This case may never be tried anyway after mental experts have examined this boy."

Carroll is charged with slaying Mrs. Sarah Hanlon, 68, with a hatchet in their home on Carter rd. Saturday. He locked himself in a bathroom and bit a policeman who broke in the door.

Investigation showed, according to police, that the youth suffered an attack of inflammation of the brain several years ago and that recently his foster parents had been advised to have him placed in an asylum.

REYNOLDS TO BE HOME FRIDAY

New York, Aug. 15 (AP)—Pan-American Airways received a report today that Richard Reynolds, brother of the late Smith Reynolds, would reach Miami on his way home to Winston-Salem, N. C., on Friday afternoon.

Reynolds, who was in Africa when his brother died, traveled across the ocean by mail packet and took a boat as far as Port of Spain, Trinidad. He will take a plane across South America to Barranquilla, Colombia, Wednesday, and from there fly to Miami.

U. S. Is Still Best Place, Judge Tells 135

The United States is still the land of bpportunity, Judge James A. Lowell told 135 new citizens today in federal court. Before admitting 60 women and 75 men to the oath of allegiance, Judge Lowell warned them to obey the laws, and, if they didn't like them to "talk it over with their Democrat and Republican friends."

ARTHUR BRISBANE

Every day Arthur Brisbane writes an average of one thousand words that bring to some important topic the clear, analytical brilliance that has made him the most widely followed writer in newspapers. Every day TWENTY-FIVE MILLION readers turn to Brisbane's column, knowing they will get the viewpoint of a man whose opinions are based on the foundation of wide experience and keen understanding.

One thousand words a day, read by twenty-five million people, means that each individual word, no matter how small or large, stands for twenty-five thousand readers.

When, day after day, year in, year out, this following of millions reads each word written by a man, that man must have something of genuine importance to say. And when all those millions are constant readers, then you know that here is a man who is stimulating, a man who can get to the core of a problem, a man who knows what he discusses.

Don't miss Arthur Brisbane's column TODAY—one thousand words every day that mean something.

And From Pasture to Links in One Jump

BOSTON IS CALLED the Athens of America. We're the home of the arts, including the manly art of scrambling ears. You can't name any burg on the map with such a fistic record as Boston's, past or present. In the old days there was the mighty John L. Sullivan, Joe Walcott, Sam Langford, George Dixon, Honey Mellody, the Glovers, the Twin Sullivans, Matty Baldwin, Al Delmont and a string of other fistic names to conjure with. Today we boast the world's heavyweight champion, Jack Sharkey; one of the best runnerups is Ernie Schaaf, the two best welterweights on the map, Lou Brouillard and Johnny Indrisano, and one of the best lightweights in the game, Sammy Fuller. There's still a few counties to be heard from. There are three other youngsters in this neck of the woods whose names are likely to be on every sporting tongue one of these days. Yeah, you're right, Ad Zachow, Tony Shucco and Stanley Pailius. Not quite sure just how this latter larruper, Stan Pailius, really does spell his name we have seen it spelled so many different ways. Why not change it to Clancey, Steve, or maybe Murphy or the grand old name of O'Hara? Make it unanimous. Call yourself Levinsky.

BUT WHATEVER his name is Stanley can spell it with both hands. The young Athol heavy is as unseasoned as a stick of newly fallen pine, as green as the grass on a putting green after a recent rain, just a raw, rank amateur at present. But oh boy, how Stan can sock! A sharp, short, natural hitter if there ever was one. That's the type of a youngster to build a champion around. Every time Charlie Mooney attempts to talk about Stanley he stutters. Stan knocks 'em all stuttering. We believe Al Delmont, as great a little fighting man as ever stepped between the ropes, has strings on this young Polish thumper from up Athol way. If he has then Stan is in good hands. But nurse him along, Al, nurse him along. He's too rare a ring prospect to be rushed into the front ranks prematurely and spoiled in the making. Let him get some seasoning and experience, Al. Give him enough time, Al, and he'll arrive, Al, he surely will arrive.

SOME OF YOU saw how young Ad Zachow from up Maine way knocked poor Leo Larivee from under his chapeau and the New England middleweight championship the other night. There's another sweet socking youngster. He's goin' right up the ladder if they'll only give him time. But, like Pailius, Zachow still is green and inexperienced and needs seasoning. As middleweight champion of New England it is going to be hard to give him the required nursing. He isn't "ripe" yet and they're likely to get him bumped off before he's ready. New England fans also are familiar with the work of Tony Shucco. Tony made a big hit in Gotham the last time he fought in New York. But we Bay Staters knew all about Shucco long ago, just as we knew about Brouillard, who all New York is raving over since he plastered Jimmy McLarnin. When New Yorkers want to know something about boxing they should come to Boston.

NOW, WASN'T IT funny? I took him for a farmer in his overalls and blue denim shirt and he took me for a city slicker in my knickers and reputation of writing things for the papers. But it was just the other way around. It took old Betsy, the black and white Holstein to bring out the truth. Betsy, who is pastured out our way, dropped her calf the other night and the news spread by kid telepathy until every child for miles around was there to see the new arrival. They pulled us along with them. When we got there this farmer feller had a halter around Betsy's head and was trying to lead her to the barn. Betsy had other ideas. Naturally she wanted to stay with her newborn calf. Old Betsy didn't know he planned to take her to the barn and then bring the calf to her. So she decided to stay planted. All the pushin' and pullin' and cajolin' and threatenin' he did couldn't budge her from that little spotted, big eyed, gangling-legged arrival.

TO A FELLER who was raised on the farm and spent his boyhood days as chambermaid for the bossies, it was plain that here was one farmer who did not know his onions. So for old Betsy's sake, and her calf's sake, and his sake, we up and advised him:

"Just let 'em rest awhile. Let her lick and fondle the strength into him. In a few minutes you'll see him get up and wabble on those long balky legs of his. If he doesn't head for the dinner plate Old Betsy will put it in front of him. Let him suckle a little and get a little strength and nourishment. Then just pick him up and carry him to the barn and Old Betsy will follow you like a dog. Just now nothing short of a cyclone, earthquake or some other act of the Almighty is going to separate her from that calf."

AND THAT'S HOW the sport's writin' city slicker showed the farmer feller—only he wasn't a farmer feller at all but just a city chap trying his first hand at agriculture and its incidental obstetrics—how to bring Old Betsy and her calf home. And say, folks, we're the hero of every kid in the neighborhood. Babe Ruth hasn't anything on us. Babe may hit home runs, but he doesn't know how to bring home little calves and their mamas. Gosh! It's great to be a neighborhood celebrity. Next thing we know they'll be wantin' our picter in the papers!

LEAVING THE bull's better half and her pride and joy in the pasture let's go out to the golf links. Here we are at the Rockville Country Club, where Gene Sarazen, winner of both American and British Open Championships, last Wednesday failed to qualify for the American Pro Championship. We're looking in Sarazen's bag. We expect to find the same clubs he used at Sandwich and Fresh Meadow. Most of us stick to our clubs like brothers. But not Sarazen. Gene gave away most of the lethal weapons that gave him the two most sought for golf titles in the world. He's eternally experimenting with new sticks. "They're making better clubs every day," explains Gene. "Golfers who continue to use the same old clubs year in and year out are that much behind the times." Maybe Gene's right. But as for us, brother, we'll stick to our old sticks and remain the world's worst golfer. We wouldn't lose that title for anything.

Movie Moguls Seek to Sign Olympians

Camera! Action!

The movie moguls are dancing around the Olympic lot with contracts, waiting to get the John Hancocks of the athletes. They've got eyes on the best of the boys and girls who ran, jumped, swam, or what have you.

It's called the Weissmuller hang-over.

Ever since paddle foot Johnnie bared his mighty chest as Tarzan, the movie public has been stricken with athlete's heart.

Take Babe Didrikson. She'll do anything in the athletic line that you can mention. She's a wonder at sports you never heard of, even. Babe would save the directors a lot of money. Because she'd never have to have a double — or a press agent.

And Eleanor Holm! There's a gal to grace the flickers in our most gilded cinema birdcages. The record she broke in the 100 meters won't compare with the box office records she'd break if she goes into the movies.

For male stars, the directors have their pick of all types. Pat Callaghan, the six-foot-four Irish hammer throwing champ, ought to make a great heavy in any drama. He has the looks, too.

Buster Crabbe, the swimmer, is another type for the celluloid, and if you think Clark Gable is the personification of rugged he-man stuff, what is Jim Bausch, the decathlon winner—a blushing violet?

Hot Latin lovers you want? Lady, we have them right from the hot countries. Juan Zabala, for instance, who could race away with the honies' hearts as he did with the Olympic marathon.

Hey nonny nonny, and Rin-Tin-Tin is dead.

AD ZACHOW TEETHED ON BOXING GLOVE

By AD ZACHOW

I fell from my high chair into a boxing ring. And I'm not trying to pull a wisecrack either.

There have been boxing gloves flying around my head ever since I was born at West New York in New Jersey.

You see, my dad, Ernest Zachow, was a teacher of boxing as well as one of the high-pressure superintendents of the National Biscuit Co. In addition to giving lessons in boxing at the Y. M. C. A. in West New York, dad also used the kitchen of our home for a gymnasium. It was there that he taught pupils who for one reason or another couldn't get to the Y. M. C. A. gym.

FELL INTO RING

Dad tells me that one night while he was giving a youngster a lesson in boxing I fell from my high chair into the ring. Perhaps that may help to explain why, at the age of 19, I'm middleweight champion of New England. I had to learn to duck punches when a baby to prevent some of dad's pupils from busting me on the chin with their wild right-hand punches.

In regard to my ancestry, Dad was born in New York city of German stock. Mother was also born in New York, and comes from Irish-Italian stock.

So I'm a German-Irish-Italian combination. I feel I have the fighting blood of each race.

I've traced my ancestry, and haven't been able to find any Indian running along the family trail. But I think I shall become world's middleweight champion without the

TEAM MUST HIT STRIDE TO STAY IN RACE

(Special to the American)

Chicago, Aug. 15—Short enders in five straight games since they started their western swing and now just a half game out of sixth place, the Braves swing into this town today for a five-game series with the Cubs, which opens tomorrow.

From almost every angle, this duel with the Cubs promises to be the crisis for the Braves in the pennant race.

Unless Bill McKechnie's team can do a complete volte-face in the current series, the Boston club may be virtually counted out of the running at the end of this week.

HOLLAND JOINS TRIBE

Facing an almost hopeless task of keeping his Tribesmen up in the running, Manager Bill McKechnie's thoughts dwell on Dutch Holland, the new outfielder who joins the Tribe today.

Holland may prove to be the one item which has been lacking in the Braves' roster. McKechnie believes that his chief difficulty has been a shattered outfield combination. Hence he hopes Holland is the answer to the Braves' troubles.

Dutch comes to the Tribe not exactly unheralded and unsung.

The Braves had their pick of the outfielders from one end of the Pacific Coast minor league to the other. The scouts chose Holland as the outstanding prospect.

DUTCH A .350 HITTER

Holland is a brawny right handed hitter who astounded the Pacific coast with his fielding and slugging ability. He bats regularly around the .350 mark, and a .350 batter is just what McKechnie is looking for right now.

If the Tribe can win a majority of the five games of this series, it will swing into St. Louis with a real chance to get back in the National league race.

The Braves were sold short on both ends of the doubleheader with the Reds, losing the opener 3-1, and dropping the second game 9-3.

The losses were the fourth and fifth straight for the McKechniemen since they started their western swing.

LUCAS CHECKS BRAVES

Red Lucas held the Tribe in the palm of his hand in the first session, allowing seven hits and fanning four. Tom Zachary started for the Braves and resigned under pressure in favor of Ben Cantwell.

The Braves had Lucas going in the fifth but only for a brief interlude in which Urbanski and Zachery singled, and Urbanski trotted home on Clark's rap to right.

Huck Betts and Pruett labored in vain for the Tribe in the second edition. Although both teams collected a dozen hits, the Reds' bingles had the scoring punch, 9-3.

Cincy seemed to tally almost at will, while the dozen hits which the Braves got off Johnson failed to push across a single tally until the seventh, when a flock of hits netted the Tribe two runs.

Five of the Cincy hits were for extra bases in the nightcap, and as Silas Johnson bore down in the pinches, the Boston team had nine runners stranded on bases.

MADISON GIRL IS CONSIDERING MOVIE OFFER

Los Angeles, Aug. 15 (AP)—Whether or not Helene Madison turns professional, someone else will have to break her world and American swimming records, if they are to be broken.

Ray Daughters, coach of the double Olympic champion, who admitted to the Associated Press that she might turn film actress, believes his 19-year-old protege is all through shattering swimming marks.

MISSED ON 5 MARKS

Helene had hoped to break every free style mark in the book, but she fell five short.

Miss Madison has captured all 16 of the world's free style records, 60 of the 65 American marks and both the 100-meter and 400-meter Olympic championships.

She broke her own world's record of 5 minutes 31 seconds, in nosing out Miss Lenore Kight of the United States team in the 400-meter race, in 5 minutes 28.5 seconds.

"Undoubtedly someone will break some of Helene's records," said Daughters, "but it will be a long time before any one person gets them all. Probably never."

Miss Madison said she felt as though she had accomplished everything possible in amateur swimming and "might accept" a movie contract.

THREE MORE GET OFFERS

Not only Helene, but three other Olympic aquatic winners are considering "cashing-in" on their swimming and diving honors.

Georgia Coleman and Mickey Riley Galiteze, winners of the Olympic spring-board diving championships, and Eleanor Holm, women's backstroke titlist, are planning to go on the stage.

HORNSBY IRED, THREATENS TO SUE GOSSIPERS

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 15—Rajah Hornsby stated today that a number of people had better be sure of their ground on stories they were circulating and also printing about him.

He threatened law suits if they continued to persecute him. He said:

"I'm getting sick and tired about all this bunk that is going around about me. Just a little more of it and some individuals are likely to find themselves with law suits on their hands.

STORIES LIES, SAYS RAJ

"They're starting stories now that I owed the Cub ball club and also members of the team money. That's an out and out lie.

"There is another story too, that I lost a lot of money at the dog tracks. I have not stepped into a dog track in my life."

Hornsby said that some newspaper men had been printing false reports about him. He continued further and also in reiteration of his statement of yesterday said:

NOT IN DEBT

"If I made bets on the horses this year that was my business. If some of the players did that was their business. Frankly I do not believe that any members of the Cubs were betting. Let me say that in justice to them."

Asked if he were broke as some stories had it, Hornsby said that this was his business, too, but intimated that he didn't have anything to worry about for a long time.

BIG TRAIN ON MOUND AGAIN TODAY

Washington, Aug. 15 (US)—A George Washington bi-centennial celebration will be staged here today in honor of a Washington baseball club, which in 1924, won the World Series.

Clark Griffiths has reassembled the team which defeated the New York Giants for the world's championship eight years ago, to play the present team of Senators for the benefit of the Professional Baseball Player's Home.

Four team managers will play with the world's champion Washington Senators of eight years ago against the present Washington Club. Walter Johnson, present manager, will start on the mound. Bucky Harris, Tigers' manager, will be at second; Roger Peckinpaugh, manager of the Indians, at short, and Earl McNelly, manager of Sacramento, will be in center field.

STANDOUT TWI FRAY ON CARD

For the first time in many years Bill Hunnefield and Teddy Donovan will be at second and first base, respectively, for one team. Former teammates, tonight at Roslindale these athletes play for George Walker's Roslindale outfit in its twi classic with Neponset at Healy Field.

In the last decade Hunnefield has played with the Athletics, Portland, White Sox, Toledo, Giants, Braves, Cleveland and Rochester. Donovan has been in the Western, Central and Three I League.

Three Suburban Twi League contests are billed tonight. Dillon Club invades De Mar Field to battle Melrose City Club. Stoneham is host to Winthrop Town Team. Revere K. C. travels to Airport Field to meet the Mt. Carmel club.

2 Horses + 1 Shell of Beer + 1 Blonde = Trouble

—By BILL CORUM—

New York, Aug. 15—You wouldn't remember Chris Von Der Ahe. Neither would I. He was one of the stalwarts of the great game of baseball back in the days when it really was in its infancy.

Chris must have been quite a character. McGraw and others who go back to the days when he was a figure along the ball trails never tire of telling stories about him.

At one time or another he must have been with several famous teams, but if my memory serves he wound up in St. Louis with the Cardinals in the early and reputedly gay nineties. There is a picture of the famous Chris, or Christ, as some spell it, here on the table before me as I write.

He appears to have been a large man with a powerful big nose swung over a moustachio that must have been ideal for straining the foam off noble seidels of beer. They did drink beer in St. Louis in those days, didn't they?

WELL-DRESSED MAN

In this picture Chris has his hair waved in front like a dowager sitting for a bridge party and the points of a wide wing collar are playing tag with the point of his chin. His coat lapels are faced with silk or satin and the knot of his cravat looks to be about the size of an ordinary fist.

It is easy to see that Chris was doing his best when the picture was snapped. He must have been about the last word in what the well-dressed man was wearing in 1890.

DON'T TRUST HORSE SENSE

In all probability Von Der Ahe was not unlike the famous August (Garry) Herrmann of our own time. Garry was a full living man; a great sport. So must old Chris have been a great sport, too, and with an eye tuned for a neatly turned ankle.

At any rate, Lee Campbell was

POREDA TAKES ON CARNERA

New York, Aug. 15 (AP)—Stanley Poreda was hailed as one of the best of the younger heavyweights, a powerful hitter with either hand, until he blocked one of Ruggirello's pile-driving rights with his chin and was knocked cold in the fifth round at Madison Sq. Garden last January.

Undiscouraged, Poreda began the long climb upward again and a few weeks ago hung up a sensational victory over Ernie Schaaf of Boston, generally regarded as the third best heavyweight in the world.

CONCEDES 60 POUNDS

Tomorrow night at Newark, the Jersey boy will attempt to hurdle another formidable obstacle in the huge person of Carnera.

Poreda will concede at least 60 pounds to the mammoth Venetian and that may prove too heavy a handicap.

The huge crowd, which stood at attention as the "Star Spangled Banner" was played, booed the demonstration and applauded the arrest.

The great crowd stood silently for hours as final champions were crowned in fencing, swimming, boxing, rowing, and equestrian sports.

The total unofficial point score gave the United States a tremendous lead, with 758 against 225½ for Italy in second place. Next came Sweden, 172; Germany, 164¼; Japan, 153; France, 151½; England, 142½; Finland, 132; and Canada, 105.

JAP HORSEMAN BEST

The concluding event was the "Prix de Nations," an arduous equestrian jumping event which brought one of the greatest surprises of the games as Lieut. Baron Takeichi of Japan, on Uranus, outrode the crack horsemen of the United States, Sweden, and Mexico to capture individual honors.

Maj. Harry D. Chamberlain of the United States on Tan Bark gave a scarcely less notable performance than the Japanese nobleman to win second place in a field of eleven contestants, only five of whom were able to finish the course. No nation was able to finish a full team of three horses.

Count Baillet-Latour, of Belgium, president of the International Olympic committee, spoke the ritual closing the games and turned over to Mayor John C. Porter of Los Angeles the silken Olympic flag to be kept here until the start of the 1936 games in Berlin.

An artillery salute was heard outside the stadium, trumpets flared, and the torch was extinguished as a chorus of 2500 voices sang "Aloha."

GREATEST EVER

Officials and athletes alike were unanimous in pronouncing the tenth Olympic games the greatest since the modern era began in Athens in 1896. More than 1,000,000 persons saw the two weeks of contests in 16 different sports.

Thirty-four new Olympic records were established, 16 of which were also world marks, and 109 Olympic champions were crowned.

The United States dominated the track and field events, with Japan and the United States sharing honors in swimming, the Nipponese taking the lion's share in the men's division, and the American girls capturing practically everything in sight n their competiton.

Individual heroines of the games were Helene Madison of the United States, who scored two firsts in swimming and participated in the record-breaking American relay team, and "Babe" Didrikson, Texas one-girl track team, who won two firsts for the United States in track and field, in addition to a close second.

MANY REACHED STARDOM

Heroes included J. Kusocinski, pale, un-athletic appearing pole, who ran Volmari Iso-Hollo into the ground to win the 10,000-meter title and break the supremacy of Finland in the distance events; Tom Hampson, ex-spectacled English school-teacher, who took the 800-meter run in the fastest and bravest exhibition of middle distance running ever seen; and William Carr, United States 400-meter man who bested his lanky teammate, Ben Eastman, to set the unbelievable new world's record of 46.2.

The "fastest human" and the only double winner in the men's track events was Eddie Tolan, stocky Michigan Negro was sprinted to glory in the 100 and 200 meter dashes.

The most popular athletes with the crowds were Miss Didrikson and Lord David Burghley of England, who reached the finals in both hurdle races.

BAUSCH IRON MAN

The "iron men" of the games were Jim Bausch, American decathlon winner; Count Johan Oxenstierna of Sweden, champion in the modern pentathlon; and Juan Carlos Zabala of the Argentine winner of the Marathon.

The gamest athletes were Miss Dorothy Pointon of the United States, who won the high diving with a sprained back and an abcessed ear, and Luigi Cardossa of Brazil, who hitched-hiked from San Francisco and ran in the 10,000 meters without rest.

McLeod and Coyne at Lincoln Park

The Bay State Wrestling Assn. will hold a wrestling show at Lincoln Park this evening, featuring Farmer George McLeod and Pat Coyne of the Coast Guard, in a finish match, with two falls out of three to win.

The semi-final will bring together Roughhouse Murphy and Eddie Giles of Tufts. This will be a no-time limit bout, one fall.

HE'S ALREADY A CHAMP TO HOME TOWN YOUNGSTERS

Ring promoters are looking to young Zachow to lift the boxing sport (and business) out of the doldrums. He's clean-cut, young, handsome and a terrific puncher. And, most important of all, he has that indefinable something called "color." Here he is with some of his pals in Dover. He's their idol and already a champ to them. Note girls as well as boys in admiring group.

SOX REST UP; BROWNS HERE TOMORROW

By JOE MOONEY

The Red Sox have a day of grace today in which to recover from the Philadelphia attack and to make ready for the invasion of the four western clubs, St. Louis, Detroit, Chicago and Cleveland, who come here in that order.

The Browns come to Boston tomorrow to open a three day stay. While McManus' stalwarts are ready to swing back into action with as much fight as ever against the far westerners, no tears will be shed by the Red Sox pitching staff if an extra day's rest is granted it by rain.

SOX HAVE LAST CHANCE

The current invasion of the western clubs offers the Sox a final opportunity to make a respectable showing for the season. Once they leave town for their final tour on the road, the club will have difficulty improving its status.

In the first game, the A's put the game on ice in the first two heats, thanks to a triple by Jimmy Foxx with three on, and a double and triple by Haas and Cochrane.

FOXX HITS 43D HOMER

Then, barring the home run slam which Foxx got in the fourth, his 43d of the year, a clout which cleared the left field fence and smashed a window in a Westland ave. garage, the Sox played the A's to a fare-thee-well.

The home boys, indeed, were much the better looking ball club in the second half of the double-header, and justly deserved the 2-0 decision.

JIM HENIGAN BACK HOME

Jimmy Henigan of Medford, who ran in the marathon at the Olympic games, returned home yesterday.

He rode to Medford in the fire chief's automobile, with Charles A. Coughlin, secretary to Mayor John H. Burke, and who headed the greeting delegation.

"Babe" Hits 33d

Washington, Aug. 14—The Yanks won their second game in succession over the Senators by a 5 to 4 score. Babe Ruth hit his 33rd home run of the season in the fourth inning.

Mr. Boston

—By JACK CONWAY—

NAP PROULX OF Taunton will make another drive in the direction of a bout with Ad Zachow when he collides with Manny Davis in a ten-round bout at an Argonne A. A. show at Fenway Park tomorrow night.

Davis has a knockout to his credit over Leo Larivee and so can not be said to be picking on a setup.

Mr Boston

Proulx recently fought a stirring battle with Ad Zachow. The latter got the decision, after ten heats of torrid milling.

I look for new interest in the middleweight division in New England now that Zachow has punched his way out front. He will give the same fire to this class that Al Mello did to the welterweight division a few years ago.

JUST SO AS to keep it in the family, Joe Monte, former boxer who is now matchmaker for the Queensboro A. C. of Brockton, has matched cousin Frank Monte to meet Benny Gersham, Dorchester heavyweight in one of the bouts on his all-star card on next Thursday night.

Pete Herman of Roxbury will toss leather at Matty Lavigne of Taunton in another bout, Jimmy Fruzetti will send Harry Alexanian of Brockton against Al DeAngelis of Revere, Andy Chapdelaine of Woonsocket will mingle with Joey Silva of Taunton, while "Irish" Joe Sullivan of the South End will collide with Harry Allen of Gloucester.

THE GROWTH OF wrestling at Revere is attested by the fact Alex MacLean was able to sign Nick Lutze to meet Charley Leahman in a finish bout tomorrow night. When MacLean first started promoting the mat game at Revere he was only able to secure the services of ordinary performers. But since his shows started to attract large crowds he has been able to sign up the headliners.

I SHALL NOW turn thoughts to the South Shore and the Cape for the next two weeks. Perhaps a little golf, some swimming and life in the wide open places will make us forget about even the depression.

I don't expect to get my golf score under 110. If I did, I would not enjoy my vacation. I might find myself taking golf seriously. That would never do. I don't want to take anything too seriously. Life is too short for that.

ZACHOW TOOK DIVE TO OPEN RING CAREER

aid of a scalping knife. My left hook will do the trick.

Dad's job with the National Biscuit Co. took him to various parts of the country. From West New York he was transferred to Clinton, Iowa, then to Omaha, Neb., next to Brooklyn and finally to Portland, Me., where he is now located.

From the time I fell from my high chair into the ring, I was interested in boxing. Dad was my trainer. He carried me over the jumps with even more care than is received by a champion of the world.

There was bag punching, rope skipping, and actual boxing with dad. I did my boxing at night in the cellar of our home at Stroudwater which is just outside of Portland.

MOTHER CHEERS FOR AD

Mother has always been one of my chief rooters, though she objected to my taking up boxing as a career. She wanted me to become an architect. As if I could get a sufficient thrill out of life drawing plans and doing other such routine work.

I have two brothers, Ernest, Jr., 16 years old, and Jules, 14. Like myself, they are both boxers. Ernest, Jr., is a middleweight, while Jules is a welterweight.

We act as sparring partners to each other, and nobody ever asks for quarter.

Put a couple of brothers into the same ring, and you get the toughest fight in the world.

I attended school at the various places where my father was stationed. When we moved to Portland, I entered Deering high school. I later attended Portland high.

TRACKMAN IN SCHOOL

While in high school, I went in for track sports. I did my best work in the hurdles, high jump and relay.

I was more interested in becoming a boxer than I was in starring in any other branch of sports.

Portland was a red hot fight town, and I occasionally accompanied my father to Exposition Hall where Chick Hayes promoted boxing.

(In the next chapter of his life story, Zachow tells how at the age of 12 he attempted to make his professional debut as a boxer against Frisco Kid, a 27 year old Filipino).

So What?

—By JOE MOONEY—

Charlie Devens can't win a ball game for the Yanks, but he can beat the whole club playing word anagrams.

It cost Colonel Ruppert $20,000 to find out that a college education is worth something after all.

And when he learned what it was, he couldn't pronounce it.

A rookie wired to Colonel Ruppert: "I can't pitch, either. But I am great playing blocks. How much?"

When Charlie introduced the game, all the Yanks went for it except Ruth. He thought Devens said "telegrams."

And Babe wouldn't play because he was old fashioned and wanted to play Post Office.

CHALLENGE CUP RACE ON TODAY

A challenge race without a defender will be run off Marblehead this afternoon when five Greater Boston yacht clubs vie in Class I for the 1-foot yachting championship.

A. E. Whittemore, who lifted last year's cup with the "Peggy" of the Corinthian Yacht Club, was recently operated upon and cannot compete this year.

In spite of the lack of a defender, Quincy, South Boston, Cottage Park, Boston and Wessagusset yacht clubs will race their prides off the lighthouse at Marblehead.

Dorchee II, skippered by Jim Finlay is the Quincy entry. Frank Hurley will guide the Oriental for the South Boston Yacht Club; Bud Brooks will sail the Sally for Cottage Park; the McIntosh brothers will contest with the Speedee, sailed by George Wightman of the Boston Yacht Club and Leslie Rawding of the Wessagusset Club is scheduled to pilot the Nipper.

The races will start at 2:30 p. m.

Marblehead triangle class sailors edged the Eastern Point Yacht squadron and tied the score, 44 to 44, in the second of the Cleghorn trophy triangle boat team matches.

The final race of the Cleghorn trophy series will be sailed today.

NUNAN, JAROSH BREAK LIGHT SWIM MARKS

Joe Nunan and John Jarosh, both of South Boston, in the annual Boston Light swim set new amateur and professional records. Nunan, 20-year-old pro reached the light first in 5 hours and 57 seconds, breaking the old mark by 19 minutes 3 seconds. Jarosh, Technology graduate, took 9 minutes 20 seconds off the amateur mark. Sam Richards, who set both records in 1911 and 1912, followed the race in his keyak.

Jarosh trailed Nunan by 100 yards.

Five completed the swim, a new record for finishers in the grind. Mike Rynne and Norman Menzies swam to within a mile of the Light and Eva Morrison, lone woman entry, finished early in the evening. With weather conditions ideal, a field of 24 took off from the bridge in Charlestown.

Jarosh, the ned record-holder, is an ex-Boston Latin and M. I. T. swimmer. He was graduated from Tech in 1930.

They summary:

1, Joseph Nunan (professional), Charlestown, 5h. 57s. (new professional record); 2, John Jarosh, South Boston, 5h. 5m. 40s. (new amateur record); 3, John Mullen, Dorchester, 5h. 27m; 4, William Handley, Brighton, 6h. 25m.; 5, John McDonough, Charlestown (professional), 6h. 40m.; 6, Eva Morrison, no time taken.

HELEN JACOBS BEST OF WEAK TENNIS ENTRY

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, Aug. 15 (INS)—In the tradition of the theater, the show must go on, and so it must be with the women's national championship in tennis singles at Forest Hills today, though its title be spurious and its honors few.

Like a court scene without the queen, this is to be a championsrip without the champion, Helen Wills Moody, and under these circumstances, it can serve no point beyond establishing who, among the 60 or more entries, is the second best woman player on the American continent. I fear the second best, in tris case is liable to be pretty ordinary.

That's no nice way to talk about Helen the Second, otherwise Miss Helen Jacobs, another Californian of note, but while the situation may present a great chance for Miss Jacobs, she cannot and will not be other than what now is, namely, not a great tennis player, even if she wins.

FAILED TWICE BEFORE

Her status, in fact, was twice before established on occasions wren she should have won, but did not These games in 1927 and again in 1930 when Mrs. Moody was not among those present but, on the first occasion, Mrs. Molla Mallory, a robust, but doddering soul, was the winner and, on the second, Betty Nuthall of England survived as ranking beneficiary.

So, on the records, it must be assumed that Miss Jacobs just hasn't got what it takes—except in a field like this.

It probably si the weakest in modern championship play, with the American entry hardly up to its best and England represented by Elsie Pittman and John Ridley.

ENGLISH PLAYERS SEEDED

The two invaders are among the seeded players. So are Mrs. L. A. Harper, No. 2 in the national ranking; Sarah Palfrey, Boston; Virginia Holleary, Philadelphia, an dCarolyn Babcock of the West Coast.

Not essentially an impressive list. In fact, some of those mentioned wouldn't figure to reach the quarter-finals in other years and those others years, at that, were significant for their principals like Lenglen and Mrs. Moody., rather than for their competition.

In other words, women's tennis, at its best, is liable to be just a little dull and inspidid as its worst—but why go on? After all, I'm just one of those fellows who studied up to be a gentleman but couldn't quite make it.

CADDY TITLE GOLF ON

TOMMY QUINN CHOICE IN TOURNEY

By BILL GRIMES

One hundred and twelve bag toters are playing in the 14th annual Massachusetts Caddy championship today at the Commonwealth Country Club, battling for the title, which Peter Bukin, the cocky Brocktonite who is over-age, allowed to go by default.

Due to the fact that the caddy championship was advanced a day in order to avoid a conflict with the United States amateur championship qualifying round, the kids did not have an opportunity to get in a practice round, which probably will cause the scores to run higher than usual, at least during the first round this morning.

TOMMY QUINN CHOICE

Although Peter Bukin, Harold McGrail, Stanley Neptune, James Martin and Benson Bosquet, who finished in the order named, are out of caddy competition, the field will be as fast as usual, with little Tommy Quinn, who was disqualified for an excusable infraction last year, the favorite.

Tommy Quinn did not qualify for the junior championship at Wollaston, but he is now back on his game, and should be at his best at Commonwealth. The little Chestnut Hill caddy will receive keen competition from the Martin twins, Leo and Eddie, of Oakley; Larry Harrigan, Sandy Burr; Bob Sanford, Waltham; Dave Walsh, Walpole, and John Janasus, Paul Revere.

At Wollaston, Tommie Quinn was far below his usual form. He had been experimenting with his swing before the junior championship in order to cure a slice, with the usual result. Although his experience has been confined to four junior and three caddy championships, Tommie Quinn is a fine competitor, and his knowledge of Commonwealth is a valuable asset.

MARTIN TWINS CAPABLE

During the past season, the Martin twins have developed rapidly and either one of them is liable to come through today. Leo qualified for the Juniors at Wollaston and this will be his third caddy championship.

Larry Harrigan, Sandy Burr, tied with Leo Martin at The Country Club and he was deadlocked with Phil Fahey, the defending champion, at Woodland, ten strokes away from Harold McGrail, the winner.

Although the caddy records fail to show that Robert Sanford has established a reputation, the Watch City boy showed sufficient ability at Wollaston to warrant mention.

DAVE WALSH THREAT

Little Dave Walsh, who has the making of a great golfer, will do his utmost today to bring another championship to the Walpole Country Club. Walsh is a real threat. Walsh's game recently has reached the stage of development which invites competition with the leading youngsters. Within a few years he will rank with the best of the younger generation.

Joseph L. S. Barton, Winchester, chairman of the M. G. A. golf committee, is in charge of the caddy championship. Since he was made a member of the Mass. Golf Association, Joe Barton has displayed a keen interest in his undertaking and has handled championships with great efficiency, even equal to that shown by C. Cameron Patterson, The Country Club, who was his predecessor.

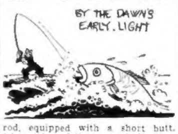
After the morning round, the contestants will be the guests of the Mass. Golf Association for luncheon.

Fish 'n Game

—By WIN BROOKS—

THE TAKING of an 11-pound striped bass on a six ounce fly rod requires an infinite skill in the art of angling. It has been accomplished by George Bishop of Milton, who took the big shark at Buzzards Bay a week ago.

In the dead calm of very early morning or late evening when the fish are running up in the very shallow water to feed, Bishop uncases a fly rod and goes to work. Recently he has been casting a minnow with a Leonard bonefish rod, equipped with a short butt. It's mighty delicate work because there's almost no limit to the size of the striper that may take hold.



BY THE DAWN'S EARLY. LIGHT

For ordinary striped bass fishing, Bishop uses a 5½ foot rod with a three ounce tip, 200 yards of nine thread line of 18-pound test, 100 yards of silk and 100 of linen backing. That in itself is mighty light tackle.

I DETAIL Bishop's experiences because he, probably better than any other man in Massachusetts except perhaps, his fishing partner, Tom Santee, knows the whys and the wherefores of the striped bass fishing now holding the major attention of the salt water anglers of southern New England. Indeed, if it were not for these two men, probably nobody would be striped bass fishing on the Cape today.

For when the stripers and the bluefish vanished from Buzzards Bay years ago, everybody but Bishop and Santee gave up fishing for them, believing they were gone for good.

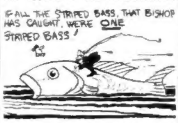
For seven years Bishop and Santee fished for striped bass without getting a strike. Several days of each year they would go down to make the annual "test" to learn whether the stripers were back. We who have grown a little weary with a day's fishing minus fish can appreciate the determination and the patience exemplified in that quest—and can visualize the thrill that came to this pair five or six years ago when the first of the returning striped bass lunged for and took an O'Shaughnessey-impaled eel. The stripers were back!



IF ALL THE STRIPED BASS, THAT BISHOP HAS CAUGHT, WERE ONE STRIPED BASS!

BISHOP AND SANTEE are no anglers to harbor good news forever under their hats. They spread the word and the Cape beaches again became so populated with surfers that there was hardly room enough for a man to make a cast.

Thomas Zick of Roxbury has taken his rods to Lake Winona, N. H., for two weeks . . . The first hammerless Winchester .22 repeater is on the market . . . And the first Remington bolt action repeater of the same calibre . . . One of the most skillful girl anglers I know is May Connolly of Dorchester . . . Big pike perch are being taken deep trolling at Lake Massapoag in Sharon.

telling a story about him the other day that was funny as he told it and that may bear repeating. It has a moral, anyhow. It proves that you can't put too much trust in the good sense of a horse either on the race track or off it.

Maybe you don't know it, but generally speaking, a mule is much smarter than a horse. Wonder why they don't race mules at Hawthorne and Saratoga? I might pick a winner of a mule race.

To get on with our story. It seems that Chris had roused the suspicions of his Madame with his attentions to a certain lady who was not unknown to the Mrs. Indeed, it had reached the point where she had announced her intentions of suing Mr. A. for divorce and naming the lady in question co-respondent.

LAWYER WINS PLEA

The case, however, was not an open and shut one. There was what the lawyers call reasonable grounds for doubt, and after a long conference Mr. Von Der Ahe's lawyer had about succeeded in inducing her to forget the divorce and let bygones be bygones. Chris, it seemed, was only too anxious to come home and be a good boy.

Then it had to rain. The rain made it impossible to play the ball game and there was Chris away from home with time on his hands. Now the Devil usually finds work for idle hands to do.

So what does Chris do but drive past the lady of the second part's home and invite her for a little drive in the park. What was wrong with that? Besides, the storm curtains were up on the buggy, making it impossible for the curious to see who was riding inside.

Everything went swimmingly until Chris stopped at a wayside restaurant near the entrance of the park to get his lady a sandwich, or possibly a shell of beer. His horses however, were not having as good a time as their owner.

While he was gone they suddenly decided it was time to go home and so they started at a brisk gait. Before the startled lady inside could grasp the lines they had jerked them from around the whipsocket and were running away.

MAMA LOVE PAPA?

On to Kingshighway they turned at full tilt with other buggies, pedestrians and innocent bystanders in hot pursuit. Now the Von Der Ahes lived on Kingshighway and these horses were headed for the barn. As they reached the front of the house they swung too short in turning into the drive and overturned the buggy.

Attracted by the noise and excitement Mama Von Der Ahe had rushed for the front door, arriving there just in time to have her co-respondent practically deposited in her arms from the overturned buggy.

I leave it to your imagination he arrived home some hours later. It's hard to conceive of any husband getting a tougher break than that, isn't it? I guess the automobile really is a vehicle of progress.

But there was no divorce after all, I believe. When Mama finally cooled out she decided that Papa had learned his lesson. And if he hadn't he should have. Only a sucker would have trusted a horse after that.

LOS ANGELES AMAZES WORLD

ting on big spreads successfully that the success of the Tenth Olympiad is just a matter of course to you, though it is sending upwards of 500,000 visitors from all over the globe, back to their homes boosting you to the skies.

It is sending them back a little envious of you, too. Envious of the summer climate that gives you warming sunshine every day, and nights so cool you have to hide under blankets. Envious of your scenic gifts of the gods that take in both the mountains and the sea. Envious of your pretty homes, and your lovely boulevards, and of your peaceful attitude toward life.

Envious, doubly envious, of your spirit, that in a time of woebegoneness of countenance everywhere else, permits you to quietly go ahead and put on a presentation that knocks all beholders bowlegged with amazement.

VISITORS AMAZED

I have interrogated many of my fellow visitors at length. I find they are all as completely flabbergasted as I am myself over your show. I find also that most of them are still surprised that the "Welcome" on your doormat is strictly on the level, and that they haven't been gypped, clipped, mistreated, or insulted.

They cherish kind words from citizens, newsboys, cops, taxi-drivers, hotel clerks, ushers, and everybody else. Los Angeles will be talked of for many a year to come in English, Finnish, Japanese, Chinese, Spanish, Portuguese, Polish, and a dozen other languages, including the Scandinavian.

Your stadium around which the Olympiad centered, is one of the new wonders of the world, but more wonderful than the stadium itself is the polite, decent, and amazingly precise handling of the crowds. The 2000 athletes from the nations of the world who took part in the Olympiad will remember until they are old men, and old women, their treatment here.

ALL SHOULD HAVE SEEN

I'm only sorry that everybody in the United States couldn't have seen this spectacle. I used up all the big words I could find in the dictionary trying to give my newspaper readers an idea of the thing, but I know I didn't even come close to the real picture.

You Los Angelenos (if that's the right way to say it) ought to pin medals on those responsible for the handling of the show. And on your private citizens, including the members of your famous movie colony, who joined so whole-heartedly in the entertainment of the visitors.

It's been a great thing, not only to your town, but for the world in general. The contests of skill, and strength, and all that sort of thing, in the Tenth Olympiad, have given us a new line on a lot of nationalities we didn't know so well before, and a new respect and admiration for them, and maybe the games have contributed something toward the peace of the world.

Anyway, folks, it has all certainly been grand, and again I congratulate you, and would add three cheers and a tiger, if I wasn't so hoarse from saying over, and over, and over, again (sometimes just to myself, when I couldn't find listeners): "WHAT A SHOW!"

Sincerely,
El Runyon.

P. S.—Say, folks, could you arrange to dig up a new Olympiad next year? E. R.

HOOVER OPENS NEW DRIVE TO AID BUSINESS

By KENNETH CLARK

Washington, Aug. 15 (US)—President Hoover has mobilized the business brains of the country to war on the depression "along the whole economic front."

He summoned business and industrial leaders to meet with him at the White House August 26 to organize a concerted program to stimulate business, relieve unemployment and restore agriculture.

The President said:

"Among the subjects which will be considered and definitely formulated are:

"A canvass of the means, methods, agencies and powers available in the country for general advancement; wider expansion of credit facilities to business and industry where consumption of goods is assured; co-ordination and expansion of livestock and agricultural credit facilities; co-ordination and expansion of financial facilities for the movement of commodities into consumption; expansion of programs for repairs and maintenance of the railways; and creation of organization for further spread of existing employment and expansion of employment.

BOND STUDY DUE

"A number of other possible questions such as the forthcoming world economic conference; protection of bond holders and mortgage renewals, co-ordination with trade groups and other subjects will be explored. It is expected to outline a basis for public, commercial and trade group co-operation in the execution of the purposes of the conference."

The President will throw the full force of the government behind the drive, co-ordinating federal and private agenices in the big push.

Chairmen of the 12 business and industrial committees established in each Federal Reserve district will meet with a number of selected government officials at the White House the day before the big conference.

Their suggestions will be submitted to more than 100 business leaders from each of the reserve districts.

SPECIAL COMMITTEES

The President announced he would appoint special committees to advise on particular questions which concern agriculture, labor, railways and other industries and groups which are affected.

Among members of the organization committee which will meet is Carl P. Bennett, chairman of the Boston district.

BANDITS ESCAPE IN WEYMOUTH

Four young bandits trussed up Peter Jenson, 59, and his wife, Loretta, in their home at 214 Forest st., South Weymouth, early today, but escaped with only $7 after ransacking the house.

Jenson was aroused by knocking at the front door. When he answered he was greeted with the gun of one of four youths and the command to "let us in, we want money."

They seized Jenson, tied a towel around his face, his hands behind his back and then bound him to the bannister of the stairway. Going upstairs the bound Mrs. Jenson.

As they left Mrs. Jenson managed to free herself and extricate her husband. Jenson attempted to telephone police, but the telephone wires had been cut.

He then aroused a neighbor, who informed Weymouth police. Jenson said the bandits fled in a car. All were well dressed he declared.

Americans' Food in Russia Cut in Half

Moscow, Aug. 15 (AP)—Food rations allotted to American and other foreign specialists stationed here in the employ of the Soviet government are cut in two by a recent order to the store in which they buy their supplies.

A general shortage of foodstuffs has been felt by the natives for some time but hitherto has not affected foreigners in the government employ.

N. H. Family Claims Berry Picking Title

Nashua, N. H., Aug. 15 (AP)—Challengers for the blueberry picking championship of New Hampshire may report to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Whitney and Mr. and Mrs. Page Whitney of Hillsboro who have, they say, 4000 quarts to back their claims.

The Whitneys have picked 4000 quarts in the past four weeks and say they will pick 1000 more in the next 10 days.

15 Hurt in Theater Bomb Blast Panic

Tarrytown, N. Y., Aug. 15 (AP)—Fifteen women and children were suffering from injuries today as the result of a panic which swept the Music Hall Theater when a bomb planted under a seat exploded.

Police, announcing they believed a "crank" was responsible, said they hoped to arrest a suspect soon.

TIMELY RADIO TOPICS

Ed Wynn Will Continue on Air

By N. F. T.

Some of the things uncovered since Saturday in sound circles, are:

COMIC CARRIES ON

Ed Wynn will not suspend his weekly broadcast in favor of devoting himself entirely to his new stage show. Footlight engagements are such as will carry the "Perfect Fool" very short distances from New York. Therefore, he plans to eliminate Tuesday evening theater activity on the road, so as to jump into New York and broadcast, as usual, right along through fall and winter months.

Jack Shannon and Marie Stoddard, after being "The Gossipers" tonight (WAAB), at 8 o'clock, proceed to be themselves and submit to an interview during the "Yankee Network Personalities" period over the same station (8:45). They will be queried by Bob Donahue.

EXCEPTIONAL EFFORT

That Marblehead yacht race descriptiond (WHDH) aired Saturday afternoon, has resulted in the heaviest mail from listeners that boss men of the station have had come to hand this year. Ex-naval Commander Raymond Brackett, Charles Egley and Gregory Smith were the announcers responsible for an unusually colorful broadcast of the detail. Listeners throughout every New England state responded to express appreciation by mail.

Patrick J. Hurley, secretary of war, is scheduled to be the principal speaker to address an NBC network audience Thursday night at 10:15. This program, planned under American Legion auspices, will be a special offering via WBZ waves.

Tonight brings a new feature (WEEI) at 7:15. That big manufacturer of loudspeakers launches a word building contest effort said to be one of the most unique competitive campaigns ever to go out by radio.

SO NEAR, YET SO FAR

When Kate Smith jumps from her RKO Keith Theater dressing room to take her regular Monday night coast to coast turn, she will be singing into a microphone at WNAC in the Hotel Buckminster studios. Tuning in that station won't produce her voice hereabouts, however. Kate will be having her program "piped" into New York (WABC) over telephone lines. From there it is carried out across the country. Boston remains one of few cities not hearing the presentation. Such is commercial sponsorship. Those who have sets that can pick up WABC in New York, will be able to hear the big gal put her "Swanee Music" into space between 8:30 and 8:45 p. m.

Seven years isn't a long time. Nevertheless, in 1925, Seth (Phillips Lord) Parker toured from East to West in an old flivver, seeing the sights before settling down to such serious business as making a living. Just a while back (1932) he covered the same ground aboard Pullman cars, heading his own theatrical company of radio artists. His group appeared at leading vaudeville theaters by popular demand. Call it luck, those who will. But never forget the tireless work Phil Lord has put into his colorful radio characterizations.

ANOTHER STAR IN PERSON

Ben Alley, celebrated wireless tenor, is also in our midst this week. Loew Theater executives have arranged for him to broadcast a late quarter hour of songs (WNAC) at 11:15 tonight, with Francis J. Cronin at the console.

One more talented Boston broadcasting lady leaves for New York for NBC and CBS auditions tonight. Frieda (Freddy) Rosenthal, Medford soprano, will complete her half hour (WHDH), from 8 to 8:30 and then scamper toward Gotham to be heard by program men who shape high-priced chain features there.

Wheat Growers on Strike for $1 Rate

Bismarck, N. D., Aug. 15 (AP)—The North Dakota wheat "strike" went into effect today with supporters claiming thousands of farmers will begin holding their wheat until the price reaches $1 a bushel.

Dell N. Wilor, Tolna, N. D., a grower and author of the plan, said the movement had gained headway in the two Dakotas, Montana, Minnesota, Washington, Oregon, Kansas, Idaho, Texas, Oklahoma, and Nebraska.

Students Off Again to Study Mine Row

Mena, Ark., Aug. 15 (AP)—A trio of students from Commonwealth College, little labor school near here, has started out for the Southern Illinois coal fields to study wage disputes, hoping for better luck than a similar investigating party had in Southeastern Kentucky.

Earlier this year, a Commonwealth College expedition invaded Southeastern Kentucky to study the coal mine strikes of that field only to be ejected.

BANKER BECOMES CLOWN IN CIRCUS BUT LACKS REAL ART OF OLD'TIME STARS

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

PROF. ROGERS

THAT WAS A GOOD STORY that came out of the West—from Spokane, Washington, to be exact—about the vice president of an investment house who goes a-circusing every year, playing clown. It rang perfectly true. One of those "believe it or not" yarns which are so perfectly calculated to catch the attention as to leave the veteran press agent gasping. He will give himself brain fag over jewel robberies and milk baths and red-haired gals on white horses and the like, and suddenly—a woman adopts a rattlesnake because it played prettily with the baby, a bunch of boys start a push-cart endurance contest, a doctor writes a symphony on the theme "Influenza," or a banker becomes a clown—Nature beats the press agent at his own game.

One believes the story because it is so American. Being a circus clown is the one and only job that a banker could venture on without loss of dignity or reputation, without being considered queer, crazy or "artistic"; without, in short, being asked to resign by his partners and smuggled away to an alienist. Supposing the man had joined a touring musical show, to become a chorus man. There would have been a run on the bank next day. But a circus, that's something else again. People can understand his doing that; people can forgive him for it; people can respect him; people can even envy him. Every other banker and broker in the state, who as a barefoot boy cherished an unfulfilled wish to run away with Barnum and Bailey's, will understand and approve and wish he had had the nerve to do the same thing. Or wish that he had had the wife who would let him do it.

Moved by Urge to Make Self Happy

Cynics may suspect that the gentleman is clowning as a kind of celebration that stocks are going up. Not at all! It is what psychiatrists—the gentlemen whom Joe Toye admires so much—call an "escape" or a "release." He may, as he insists, want to make kids happy. But what is more important, he wants to make himself happy. There is probably some connection between the two urges.

How differently we view it from the Russians. Leonid Andreyev, our mad, sad—but emphatically not glad—brother, once wrote a play about a first-chop literary man who joined a circus to become a clown. The piece was called "He Who Gets Slapped" and the hero was called simply "He." His job in the circus was to be slapped, hard, on the face by everybody else in the circus for the amusement of the paying guests. He did this to express his sense of the utter worthlessness and futility of existence. Man was a pitiful object, always being slapped in the face by life. So "He" became "the slapped," taking the rap for humanity and getting some kind of queer, masochistic, inner satisfaction out of it. At the end of the play he killed the girl he loved to keep anybody else from getting her. Then he killed himself. He died happy.

But whether the Russian gentleman got any fun out of being slapped or not, you can bet your boots that even a Russian audience liked to see him slapped. There is nothing as fundamentally satisfactory on stage or screen as seeing some comical feller suffering aggravated assault, being whammed on the sit-spot, run over by tanks, dropped out of airplanes, sand-bagged by large objects from above, seltzer-siphoned and slap-sticked generally. The last "Our Gang" comedy I saw was one of the best ever. It concluded with an elaborate display of fireworks in the aisle of a pullman car made up for the night. That was gorgeous, but it was not really funnier than the simple device of teaching a young, innocent-eyed baby to crash his little fist into the face of everyone within reach. So long as these things amuse people, it is idle to hope much from Geneva.

But what do the clowns themselves think about the amateur? I suppose that the younger men in the business, who have never known anything except the stupid and mechanical walk-around, will take him for granted. Being a clown in a big circus means little nowadays. He is not an individual. He is one of a large indiscriminate procession. All he needs is a novelty make-up or, preferably, some complicated mechanical device. The mechanism is the fun-maker, not he. He walks around the arena with a dead pan and lets it go at that.

But the older clowns must see in the banker's blithe assumption that anybody can be a clown if he feels funny enough, the last blow to true clowning. What would happen, they must ask themselves, if a clown decided he wanted to be a banker or broker as a kind of vacation? He would be thrown out on his ear. In the old days, the same thing would happen to an amateur who decided he wanted to be a clown.

Old Clown Was Individual Artist

The old clown was an individual artist in comic pantomime. He worked alone, or in pairs or trios. He was not merely an item in a walk-around. He probably was born in a circus family and started as a boy. He served years of apprenticeship, as the third man, the feeder in a good team. Slowly he built up for himself a personality, a make-up all his own, even a psychology. If he were good enough he became as famous as any romantic actor of the theater. He sustained and carried on the tradition of Grimaldi.

The famous Grock was a clown of that stripe. So was that indefatigable kibitzer and meddler of the old New York Hippodrome, who called himself Marcelline. William Schrode, who used to play in the old Hanlon Superbas, was another. There are not many left and those who have stuck to the mammoth seven-stage circus have all but lost their identity. The real clowns of the old dispensation are in the moving pictures. Charlie Chaplin is the greatest. Buster Keaton comes next. Burlesque still develops them. Bozo Snyder belongs.

Clowning in the great tradition is a subtle art. It demands a quick perception of the incongruous, and absolutely logical mind which, starting with an absurd premise, can carry it step by step to the most preposterous conclusion. It demands the creation of a genuine character and the ability to put that character over by carefully studied but seemingly spontaneous pantomime.

Americans do not make very good clowns. Their idea of clowning is more or less hap-hazard cutting up and playing the fool. Nearly all the great clowns have been developed from circus families in the long-lived European circuses. For Europe considers that anything worth doing at all is worth doing well, developing into an art—cooking, waiting on table, selling over the counter, clowning, and the like. We are beginning to learn something about the value of technic from Europe. Even Roxy's ushers are a worth-while beginning.

I am glad for the Spokane banker's sake that he can indulge his boyish dream by doing a circus walk-around. But he must never for a minute think that he is really a clown!

REV. BROUGHER IN GARB OF GIGOLO

Banker Defends McKnight 'Gambling' Loans

GIGOLO SERMON ILLUSTRATED IN PERSON

Rev. J. Whitcomb Brougher, Jr. at Tremont Temple Condemns Dancing, Necking

When the Rev. J. Whitcomb Brougher, Jr., temporary pastor of Tremont Temple, and permanent pastor of the First Baptist Church of Glendale, Calif., preaches on a sermon, he illustrates it.

When he preached last night on "Just a Gigolo" he illustrated that, too, by going into the pulpit dressed for the part.

He wore well-pressed white striped flannel trousers, a snappy sports coat, shiny black shoes, a red necktie, with red and white handkerchief to match, a costume to make any gigolo envious.

In the pulpit, he threw back his wavy black hair, and told his listeners that many modern youths and girls were in the position of the hero of the famous song hit—doing something they hate and for which they are not fitted, but drifting through life with no hope.

People know the part they're playing."

Rev. Mr. Brougher made it clear to reporters today that he knew nothing about American gigolos, and used the song purely as an illustration.

"I went to a gigolo cafe once in New York," he said, "and I did not see what I expected to. It was pretty futile and tame.

"Young people should be warned against the dangers of dancing and necking.

"The second is the logical conclusion of the first.

"Some day the human race will develop to the point where both will be outlawed just as we have outlawed drink."

LITTLE GIRL PLUNGES FROM PIAZZA

BOY SWIMMERS RESCUED

Attempting to swim from Thompson's Island to Squantum, George Sears, 15, and Joseph Sadoski, 16, students at the Farm and Trades School on the island, were rescued when on the verge of exhaustion.

The shouts of the youths were heard by Placy LaCanere of 19 Harbor View st., South Boston. He swam out to their assistance. Anthony Mullen of 87 M st., South Boston, and Byron Livingstone of 451 Lynn st., Malden, secured a boat and rowed out to pick up LaCanere and the boys.

LINER GEORGIC ON FIRST TRIP

The motor vessel Georgic, newest of the White Star liners, sailed proudly out of the harbor on her first east-bound voyage to Galway, Queenstown and Liverpool.

SECURITY WIFE PUT UP AMPLE, SAYS BARNES

Medford Trust Treasurer Says He Took Authority to Lend Bank's Cash

At the time Mrs. Edwin T. McKnight, wife of the president of the closed Medford Trust Co., got loans totaling $157,000 from the bank, her collateral was of sufficient value to warrant them, Charles N. Barnes, treasurer and director, testified today.

He was the first witness at resumption of the hearing before Master W. Blood of Bank Commissioner Guy's bill in equity seeking to fasten individual responsibility upon McKnight, his wife and 22 directors.

Barnes was bank treasurer for 22 years and was head of the commercial department from which Mrs. McKnight obtained loans of $35,300. When asked who gave him authority to grant loans he said nobody gave it to him—that he took it.

He said he knew Mrs. McKnight was a substantial stockholder in the bank and that her collateral was always "high grade." It dwindled to a value of $22,000 while her indebtedness to the bank remained at $157,000.

Master Blood asked Barnes if Mrs. McKnight ever telephoned him as to whether she could get loans and he said he didn't recall, but presumed she had.

10 INJURED AS AUTOS CRASH

Ten persons were shaken up in a crash which tied up traffic on three busy streets in Medford last night. The crash occurred on Middlesex ave., near the junction of the Fellsway and Revere Beach parkways.

A machine driven by Louis Zorsy of Fenway collided with one operated by John F. Studley of 24 Forest st., Wakefield. In Zoray's car were Fritz Adams and James A. Ross of the Fenway address, Misses Ruth Porter, 51 Sherwood rd., Swampscott; Marjorie Hatch, 19 Ingalls ter., Swampscott, and Agnes Henigan of Melrose.

In Studley's car were Robert G. Peterson and his two sisters, Mary E. and Janice Peterson of 27 Rockland ave., Malden. All were shaken up and Peterson was taken to the Malden Hospital for observation.

Sacco-Vanzetti Meeting Planned

The fifth annual Sacco-Vanzetti memorial meeting has been arranged for Monday night, August 22, at the Old South Meeting House, with Norman Hapgood, writer and former minister to Denmark, heading the list of speakers.

Others on the program will be John Finerty, Washington attorney; Arthur Garfield Hays of New York; Dr. Robert Briffault, a British surgeon and anthropologist, and V. F. Calverton of New York. Miss Alice Stone Blackwell of Dorchester will preside.

GANG HOLDS KEY TO SLAYING

Despite reports that Frank D'Arrigo, West End sheik, had been slain by an irate husband, police today maintained their belief the youth had met his death in a feud growing out of nigger pool operations.

Officials believe that the youth's associated with Charles Castelone, murdered pool king, definitely linked him with pool operations in the West End.

Police admit the dead man was well known in the West End, and numbered several married women among his friends.

Reports to police indicated that D'Arrigo had been slain as a result of a secret affair with the wife of a North Shore man. It was revealed D'Arrigo had been discovered with the woman in her home a few weeks ago and had narrowly escaped the husband's wrath at the time.

Police indicated early today that they would visit two North Shore cities today in checking up these reports.

Back Bay Man Is Injured by Train

He was taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital and held there for observation.

POLICE ANSWER CAT-CALL

ELIZABETH LYNCH — DOROTHY LEE

Police armed with riot guns rushed to the market of James H. White on O st., South Boston, when the supervisor of the South Boston exchange heard a peculiar crackling sound on an open wire to the store. Patrolmen Arthur Pugsley and William Black boldly entered the store, only to find a cat calmly rubbing its back against the telephone transmitter. "Puss" is shown with two of her friends.

TRIPLE PROBE IN HORSE FIRE

A three-fold investigation was under way today to determine the cause of the $150,000 fire which destroyed the Metropolitan Driving Club building and stable in Brighton, and took the live of 44 horses.

The clubhouse will be rebuilt and the club will continue its activities despite the blow, according to William J. MacDonald, president of the club. The directors will meet this week to discuss plans.

The blaze was discovered by three youths, who were walking along Western ave. They are: William McKay of 301 Western ave., Brighton; Norman Hollis of 137 Massachusetts ave., Cambridge, and James Winters of 287 Western ave., Brighton.

Shouting to a passerby to sound the alarm, they rushed to the club and roused the superintendent, Samel James, his daughter, Esther, 18, and his son, Philip, 12, who were asleep. They then rushed to the stables and succeeded in leading several horses to safety.

The girl suffered several burns and cuts when a horse she was leading bolted. John Wollen, 77, a caretaker, who was rescued by the three youths, also sustained burns.

VOICES called back and forth. Larry watched the two girls come on board to be fawningly greeted by Pratt.

"Welcome aboard," said Pratt, making a mock bow over his commodore's cap.

"Gee—this is swell!" exclaimed Blondie, looking around in amazement.

"I told you, my dear—a palace in the sea!" chirped Lurline.

"Would you like to come around before you take your furs off?" asked Pratt, taking Blondie's arm.

"Do, dear," urged Lurline. where's Larry?"

Quickly catching sight of him, standing idly by the rail, Lurline joined him.

"Why didn't you call? I would have come aboar dwith you . . . you never cease trying to humiliate me."

"What's the idea of bringing that kid here for Pratt?" he demanded.

"Jealous?"

"Perhaps!"

"I thought so—she told me a great deal—you see she happens to be my friend."

"What kind of a friend are you to her . . . to start her on this racket?"

"Racket?" . . . Larry, what are you talking about?" she asked, in her best tone of innocent surprise.

GREAT RESPECT FOR HER

"I suppose you didn't try and head her off the track . . . I suppose you were holding her on the track with two arms . . . just like this weren't you?"

"No . . . I have great respect for her . . . she's decent!"

"And I suppose I'm not?"

"I didn't say you weren't—and you're not going to trap me into a brawl here . . . Now—I'll tell you this—I'm through for keeps! I made arrangements today to settle some money on you . . . the whole thing's been very foolish. It can't get either of us anywhere!"

Lurline was stunned. For a moment she was at a total loss for words, trying to comprehend what tragedy this meant for her. Before she could reply a little group of guests joined them at the rail.

"Hello, Lurline! Hello, Larry, old boy!"

But Larry had gone, leaving Lurline to the smart cracks of the girls.

AT SHIP'S BAR

Blondie and Pratt were standing at the ship's bar. She had listened attentively as Pratt pompously told her about the boat, using his newly acquired nautical vocabulary. Now he was talking to her with a sleek gentleness.

"I think the Follies are very fortunate. You're a very decorative young lady . . ."

"I've been called a lot of things."

"And you start rehearsals for about three weeks, I suppose?" said Pratt, as he poured some champagne into their glasses.

"Yes—Mr. O'Brien—do you know him? He was great . . . gave me a couple of looks . . ."

"I don't blame him . . . I feel like looking at you myself," and Pratt's face moved in closer to her.

"I've never been on a yacht before . . ." said Blondie, quickly.

"I hope you're coming often . . ." then raising his glass, "Dring up!"

"I had too much of this last night —oh-h-h-h!" exclaimed Blondie, taking her glass.

"The bubbles or life!"

"The bubbles down your nose, you mean . . ." and they drank.

"Hello, Blondie!" Larry had approached unnoticed.

"Oh, Mr. Belmont!" said Blondie, trying to be cold.

"Okay!"

"Now—here's the bridge up here . . ." said Pratt, impatiently.

"What does she want to see the bridge for? . . . Just a lot of old compasses and charts . . . you don't want to see the bridge?" said Larry.

PRATT GLARED

"Are you coming?" he asked Blondie.

Silly Verse No. 2

I wish I had a pint of glue
For then I know what I would do.
I'd wallow in it with a smile
And stick around you all the while!

—SILLIE BILLIE.

Found: Vine, the Villian!

To the Hub-Man-Who-Snored in the berth opposite lower five, car 7, on the midnight train out of Manhattan Friday: The villain you're looking for is Dave Vine, the little comic of sartorial splendor at the R-K-O Boston this week . . . Dave it was who had to have his sleep on that train at any cost . . . And who couldn't go for the death-like rattles of a Snoring-One across fro mhis berth . . . Dave it was who finally remonstrated with the porter but with no results . . . And Dave it was who finally put his hand in the S. O.'s berth, shook him and called loudly, "Boston . . . Boston!" . . . With the S. O. becoming silent and Dave sleeping the sleep of babes! . . . While the S. O. dressed, took his luggage to the platform, asked the porter, "How many more minutes before Boston?" . . . To hear the dusky lad answer, "Why, Boss, we're only two hours out of New York!" . . . When the porter told Dave in the morn that the Snoring-One was going to wring the neck of the "funny person" who treated him so . . . Then it was that Dave was seen sneaking off the rear of the train at Back Bay, sun-up time Saturday, scanty of dress, with his clothes in one hand, his luggage in the other, fear in his heart and trembling in his knees! . . . We're beginnng our week by hoping it's not too late for Dave's neck-rumpling party!

Sweet Nothings and All That!

Mary Rafferty, pretty school marm of the Prince st school, and Roxbury's Johnnie Gallagher true-loving in the better manner . . . When will James Strong of the Albany st yards make his "Winnie" a Strong? . . . It's just about time! . . . Malden's Rutina Anderson going for gondola-riding in Italy right now but still sighing over her tall Only One right here in Boston! . . . Rutina soon on her way to visit relatives in the land-of-the-heather . . . Attention pretty ones; ex-Harvard football captain, handsome "Chick" McLoughlin, now a sedate barrister, is campaigning for State Senatorship from Wards 4 and 5 . . . And is a bachelor, a most eligible one, and might smile twice on a Merry Maid just about now! . . . marriage that's surely taken is that three-year-old one of radio's Nat Brusilof, Kate Smith's batoneer, and his Mildred . . . It has made a confirmed home man out of the fun-loving director and if you want to see the proud pappy front of the man just ask to see his baby's photos—and watch him count them each time after he gets them back from you giving them the once-over—making sure you've not as nertz about the photos as he is! . . . Wonder if that's a true one about Mark Hellinger making up his mind soon to take a nine-months' trip about the world to try and forget — the luscious Gladys Glad his ex-mate . . . And we know it's true, that June-sneak-off-marriage between Herbie Sulkin, accordionist for Ruby Newman (Boston's Roger Wolf Kahn), and the cute bit of fluff you see attached to Herbie's arm! . . . And that Sulkin man never knows any gossipy-bits — no, not even about himself!

Telling You:

That Nils T. Granlund (N. T. G.), the Ziegfeld of Broadway's Nightclubdom now at Loew's Orpheum, has a petite, blonde wife one-thousandth per cent prettier, sweeter of manner and more intelligent than any of his bevy of floorshow queens excepting Dottie Justin! . . That we snooped during one of their family meals out one night at Max's famous 86th street Brauhaus, to find Mrs. N. T. G. beautiful in trim tailored attire, lugging a huge book under her arm, which she proceded to read throughout the meal! . . . That there are two, buxom lasses at the Beth Israel Hospital who fold the 30,000 pieces of laundry there weekly who can put Mary Wigman exponents to shame with their graceful movements and plastic poses in so doing . . .

Mountain Made!

Seventy-two hours after Providence's Elinor Farrell arrived in Manhattan four months ago she was auditioning at WABC for none other than Abe Lyman! . . But when Lou Irwin, agent, began tolking high percentages El's sponsor and advisor, Charlie Forsythe, hit the roof . . . With El thinking that much of Charlie's judgment, years of trouping etc., that she abided by his say-so and left Lyman's offer there in the corner . . . Elinor weighs 258 pounds, is touchy about it . . . Says "There is only one Kate Smith" . . . Was thrilled when the two Mountain Women met outside the Palace stage-door last week . . . Gives all credit for her being on the RKO Boston stage this week, with Charlie Forsythe and Addie (The Little One) Samon, to Charlie who discovered her here last Spring . . . Raves about her new stage wardrobe, especially since Addie's mother (an ex-5th Ave. modiste) who's ailing, burned midnight oil to make it for her . . . Is sensitive about size of her feet . . . Has never gotten over the insurance agent who called at her home when she was a 14-year-old mountainette wearing huge corrective-supporters on her feet and said, "Oh! You've got your fathr's shoes on!" . . She cries instantly when things go wrong . . . Laughs a lot . . . Doesn't dance enough in her present vehicle . . . Norma Shearer Stars in 'La Tendresses' as Her Next Screen Venture

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Louella O. Parsons

Los Angeles, Aug. 15—No monotony of roles for Norma Shearer. Her husband and severest critic, Irving Thalberg, is far too shrewd to run the risk of typing her. Norma's pictures all offer her a wide variety of characterization. Her last picture, "Smilin' Thru," a sweet, romantic story, bears no resemblance to "Strange Interlude" or "Divorcee."

And the next Shearer picture? Ah, here is something interesting again. She will be starred in "La Tendresses," a modern story on the order of "Divorcee."

Ruth Chatterton, who was married on Saturday to George Brent, brought "La Tendresses," to the screen and next to "Mary Rose" it was possibly her oustanding stage achievement.

Three weeks' holiday and then Norma will be back on the job.

Calhern Signed

If you start to read Warden Lawes' "20,000 Years in Sing Sing" you will never put it down until you finish it. When I found it on my reading table I scanned the opening chapter and didn't put the book down until I finished it. Filming a seller as popular as this "20,000 Years in Sing Sing" number is no easy task. Warners are finding their work cut out for them. They have signed for one of the chief roles Louis Calhern, well known stage actor and former husband of Julia Hoyt. He was only recently put into the "former" category, I might add, for only last week he was divorced at Reno. Bette Davis is returning from her personal appearance tour to add a little feminine decoration.

Vacation Delayed

A vacation trip to the high Sierras was all mapped out by Joseph McGillicudy Sherman, eminent P. A., and his wife, Mary Doran. Joe departs alone while Mary remains to play a prominent role in "Breach of Promise" for World Wide pictures.

A Line or Two:

Someone brought Gary Cooper a spider monkey and it looks as if Toluca has a rival. This monkey is the same breed as the one Douglas Fairbanks uses in "A Modern Robinson Crusoe" and he is as bright as a dollar. Ben Bard has gone to New York to complete arrangements for a revue that he and Ruth Roland plan to open at the El Captain theater in Hollywood. Movie and other talent will be combined in a gigantic vaudeville program. Sounds as if I were press-agenting the enterprise with all those adjectives. There is bound to be a revival of Ziegfeld's music and Ziegfeld's shows. Mary Eaton is putting on a tabloid version of "Sally" for the Fanchon and Marco circuit. At the same time Miss Eaton is emoting in the west in the famous Ziegfeld play. Marilyn Miller will be the star in a revival of "Sally" in the east.

Hollywood Chatter:

Two charming people are leaving Hollywood. Raymond Massey has asked that his contract be indefinitely suspended at Universal and his wife, Adrianne Allen, has asked for a release from her Paramount contract. Both of them are delightful and it's too bad Hollywood is to lose them. They sail for England via Quebec for a holiday abroad, after which Mr. Massey returns to play opposite Katharine Cornell in a stage production. Just as he was leaving he was offered an excellent part by Universal. Seems to me a pity these two people didn't get a better break. I don't know whose fault it was, or if anyone's fault or if it was just one of those unfortunate happenings. Herbert Marshall, another Englishman who came here, remains for at least another year. He has signed a contract for two pictures in 1933 with Paramount.

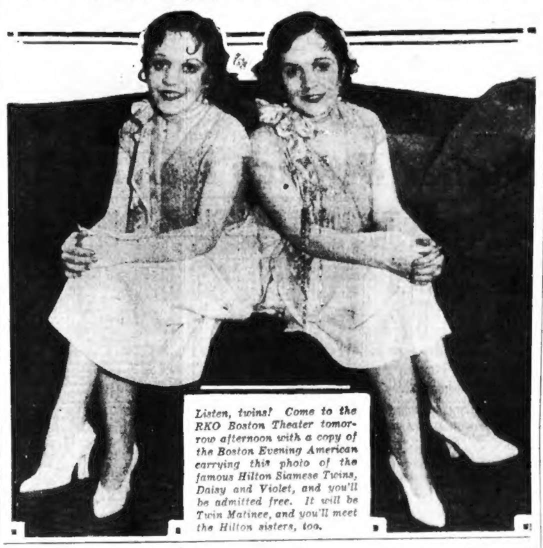
Kate Smith Inaugurates RKO "GREATER SHOWS"

FREE TICKETS TO SEE THESE TALENTED TWINS



Listen, twins! Come to the RKO Boston Theater tomorrow afternoon with a copy of the Boston Evening American carrying this photo of the famous Hilton Siamese Twins, Daisy and Violet, and you'll be admitted free. It will be Twin Matinee, and you'll meet the Hilton sisters, too.

"Songbird of the South" Gets Tremendous Hand; Preisser Sisters Back

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

The initial program at RKO Keith's in the Harold B. Franklin organization's "Greatest Show Season" goes over in gala fashion. The stage bill has the house applauding loudly at frequent intervals; the variety's excellence receives reward in the standing room only attendance, and appreciative responses from the audience.

H. B. Franklin

RKO paid especial attention to the beginning of his special big show period, by sending over Terry Turner, of its headquarters staff, to see that all details had been attended to. President Franklin had laid out elaborate plans, and checking up revealed that Keith's and the Boston were both 100 per cent efficient in carrying them out. Turner brought word of even greater shows to come, all a part of the Franklin policy of "saying it to the public" with quality on stage and screen.

The central figure in the new Keith footlight fare is that popular and weighty lass, Kate Smith, who "wows" them like nobody's business.

Kate gets a tremendous hand as she bursts upon the view, just after Nat Brusiloff and his band have struck into "When the Moon Comes Over the Mountains." Kate must be the lady in the moon; if so, then this whole audience is moonstruck. They simply go wild over her.

Out of the band comes Boston's own Jack Miller, to sing, with handsome plaudits forthcoming at the finish. Ed Garr is generous with his imitations, neatly done, of the "big shots" in showdom. Brusiloff and band are liberal, too, with their musical output. Kate sings ever so often, all the favorites, and some new ones, always effectively. Then—

Cherry and June Preisser, those wondrous girls who sing and dance as few others can.

Kate and her entertainers are at last permitted to depart for a rest between shows. On screen is unfolded the theme behind "The Age of Consent," a photoplay built upon the younger generation idea, with situations that are heralded as "daring." The acting is good, humor finely handled. John Halliday is outstanding as the professor. Dorothy Wilson makes a nifty bow into filmland.

Chic Sale Film on Three Bills

Chic Sale is the star of "Stranger in Town," new film topping the double bill at the Fenway, Modern and Beacon. This is an amusing comedy, nicely directed and acted, and with much humor. Ann Dvorak gleams brightly as the heroine; other good ones are David Manners and Noah Beery.

Gala New Program for Bowdoin Patrons

Sterling Stage and Screen Bill Is Offered at RKO Keith's

Those rarely talented sisters, Violet and Daisy Hilton, Boston's own Charlie Forsythe, and other excellent performers give unusual distinction to the new RKO Boston stage show, while the theater's screen fairly sings with the brilliance of one of the best of all the American talkies, Columbia's masterpiece, "American Madness," starring Walter Huston. It's one of the best all-round programs the Boston has put forth, and furnishes superb entertainment clear through.

The Misses Hilton are Siamese Twins, but they don't need that feature to put them across. For they are both versatile. One is amazed at their ease and cleverness, whether dancing, singing, playing their musical instruments, or pattering along in comic vein. It is not until you learn they have been on the boards since they were babies, that you understand their stellar work is the result of long experience in show business. They have good support from Denny Allen and Vic Lynn.

Like them, Charlie Forsythe gets an ovation when he comes on. Charlie, always a favorite locally, and one of the best of younger male singers, in our opinion, appears in a skit, "For Heaven's Sake Dance." The Misses Seamon and Farrell, appearing with him, are also fine.

Ann Pritchard is presented in a richly colorful act. It is titled "A Dance Travelogue," and is beautifully staged. Her assistants are Frank Hyer and Eddie Pritchard. Other good acts are those of Mrs. Vine's Boy, Dave; Mangean's Internationals, gymnasts, and the "Laff-ectionately yours" Kirby and Duval, comedians.

HAVE YOU MADE YOUR WILL? . . . Do you realize it is the final description of your own character . . . and will be preserved as an example of your "soundness of mind" as long as our nation preserves its records.

Often we are shocked by the thoughtless or the irresponsible terms of some will . . . it may be among our own people; it may be one of which we read in the press.

A doting grandfather passes over his own children, and leaves the bulk of his fortune to a favorite grandchild. Some widow left with the power of apportionment wills the larger part of an estate to charities and distant relatives ignoring the first children or family of her husband's first marriage.

Naturally, if a man in his lifetime has made ample settlements on his wife and leaves his estates to other members of his family, she can have no grievance. Again, if he has taken care of the welfare of his children during his life, leaving his [illegible] to his widow is a matter of form.

New Yorkers in Bridge Victory

Elberon, N. J., Aug. 15 (U.S.)—The fourth annual summer tournament of the American Bridge League came to a close last night at the Deal Club after an exciting week's play replete with victories for experts and near experts.

The final round of the national team of four championship for the Asbury Park challenge trophy, the last event on the program, was won by the New York quartet, Michael Gottlieb, Theodore Lightner, Oswald Jacoby and Louis Watson. They defeated the group composed of George Reith, Mrs. Anne Rosenfeld of Cleveland, B. Jay Becker of Philadelphia and Herbert Lent of New York, by 6070 points. The match was played in four daily sessions. Twenty-seven teams entered the elimination contest which narrowed down daily to two teams.

Among the eliminated players in this and other events, six events in all, some of the country's veteran champions were downed.

The women's national pairs championship was won by Mrs. H. L. Peterson and Mrs. Jay S. Jones, both of Philadelphia, scoring 1140 per cent, and receiving the Wilbur C. Whitehead trophy. Second, Mrs. M. S. Zontlein and Miss Florence Fitch, both of New York, scored 1137.3 per cent.

Mrs. F. H. Prince Rallies After Fall

Newport, R. I., Aug. 15—Mrs. Frederick H. Prince of Pride's Crossing, who suffered a slight concussion and numerous injuries to the face when she fell on the deck of the Prince yacht, Lone Star, was practically recovered early today.

Fashion Show Also Included on Program

The Christopher Shop, whose president, Mrs. Thomas Motley, is a most efficient and enthusiastic worker in all its activities, is to have a benefit arranged, which has been awaited with keen interest, at Magnolia on Monday afternoon, Aug. 22, at Del Monte's.

The benefit is to be a cabaret and fashion show, now being prepared by Mrs. Wilbur Warren Higgins, Mrs. Ralph Doane, and Mrs. Jonathan Brown, 3d.

On Program

This event follows the program staged last year, which attracted so much attention that every table was booked and large numbers had to be turned away for lack of room.

In the program this year are a group of society entertainers which include Miss Linda Collens and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Terry Collens, who will sing; Mrs. Jonathan Brown, 3d, of Beverly, and Mrs. Francis Lee Higginson, Jr., of Manchester will render some of their delightful tap-dancing numbers.

Miss Jane Bancroft will do some clever imitations, and a group of singers includes Mr. Edward Cole of Hasty Pudding fame, Mr. Alden Davis of Magnolia, Miss Nancy Whitman of Beverly and Miss Emma Kidder.

Among Models

During the intervals Miss Helen [illegible] will show a new line of [illegible] gowns. She has a troupe of [illegible] ladies assisting her as models, including Miss Fred[illegible] Miss Ellen Warren, Miss Madelyn Phillips, Miss [illegible] White, Miss K[illegible], Miss Caroline Hanrowe, Miss Frances and Barbara Proctor, Miss Harriet Morse, Miss Linda Collens, Miss Jane Bancroft and Miss Elizabeth Hovey.

The Christopher Shop, an institution which has for its object the care of physically handicapped men and women, endeavors to place these unfortunate members of the community in employment suited to their needs and assists them to maintain their homes and families.

Geraldine Ulmar, Ex-Actress, Dies

London, Aug. 15—Geraldine Ulmar, actress and vocalist, who was born in Boston, Mass., died Saturday. She was 70 years old. Miss Ulmar retired from the stage in 1904 and subsequently devoted herself to the teaching of singing.

Summer Styles of the Fashionables

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

Miss Katherine Wood, who is a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Henry H[illegible] [illegible] attended the [illegible] exhibition match and [illegible] looked very charming. Miss Wood is a blonde with a graceful and slender figure and an enthusiasm that makes her very popular with the younger crowd of the South Shore. She wears a canary yellow bathing suit that blends with the aquamarine of the Eel River Beach Club swimming pool, and is very becoming. In fact one is reminded of a symphony of gold with her golden hair and the "Canary Special" suit.

Yellow Skirt

Miss Mary Atkins, who is the daughter of Dean and Mrs. Chester Greenough of Harvard University, is spending the summer with her parents at their Plymouth home. She is a student at Vassar of high standing scholastically and is very popular with the girls. Miss Atkins is one of the best skippers on the South Shore, having sailed her Duck to many a victory.

Mrs. Lothrop Withington crews for her and the two are thought to be a formidable threat on the Plymouth Bay. They are representing the Plymouth Yacht Club in the Duxbury races which are being raced just at the present time in Duxbury. Miss Atkins is a splendid diver and in her flame colored suit executing difficult dives that calls for perfect muscular control, she is a sight good to see.

Glossy Hair

She is often seen on the golf course in a canary yellow skirt and becoming little sport sweater with short sleeves to match, but her game of golf causes one to cease to concentrate upon her wearing apparel she plays such an outstanding game for a girl.

Miss Mimi Parks, the talented and beautiful young singer daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Parks of Jamaica Plain, appears in a fresh cool looking little afternoon dress of brown and white figured silk, with brown and white sport pumps [illegible] to match. [illegible] We [illegible] sports [illegible] brown [illegible]

Miss Parks is only 19 and it is a great thrill to her to realize that her lovely singing voice [illegible] brought her the honor of a New York engagement [illegible] radio, think of that! She is a charming little blonde with shining glossy hair and do you know that's quite a treat of today when there are so many permanent fuzzes.

Miss Parks has a very delightful contralto voice which she uses to charming advantage especially if one has the pleasure of hearing her "in the flesh," for being very pretty and having a way with her part of the charm is to watch her sing as well as to hear her. She sings with great animation but none of the [illegible] jazz.

Three Injured in Belmont Crash

Three women suffered slight injuries last night when an auto operated by Mrs. Mary MacDonald of Maple ave., Cambridge, crashed into a tree when she lost control of the machine in Concord ave., Belmont.

Mrs. MacDonald and Mrs. Mary Kersey of I st., South Boston, and Miss Lillian Quinlan of Maple ave., Cambridge, were cut and bruised.

Books—And a Number of Things

—By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE—

A strange, exotic novel, translated from the German, has been issued in this country by the Viking Press. It is "The Journey Inward" by Kurt Heuser, and some information about the author will help you to a fuller understanding of his book.

It seems that he is but 27 years of age. He was born in Strasburg, Alsace, the son of a General Staff officer who fell in the war at an early age. When Strasburg was occupied by the French after the Armistice, those left in the Heuser family were forced to leave their native city. The young man went to [illegible] where he attended school and then decided to study law at the University in Munich.

In the meantime great changes had taken place in Germany. We can all remember this period, when not only Germany, but the whole world, seemed to rock with emotion. But a more desperate mood settled over the German people, and one as sensitive as young Heuser felt it moving over the land. A profound depression seized him and he longed to save his conceptions of Germany and Europe for the future.

Unable to cope with conditions at home he decided to forego his studies and begin life anew under entirely different conditions. He attended a colonial training school and took courses in farming, determined to settle down in Portuguese East Africa as a farmer.

In a region which is nothing but a jungle, he and a German friend wearily began their lonely task of cultivating the soil and laying out a cotton plantation. In this barren environment he began to write. He sent his stories to the leading German literary reviews, and in accompanying letters stated that he did not look upon himself as an author, but had put his pen to paper in order to pass the time in his loneliness. The editors saw the power in his manuscripts and afterwards they were collected under the general title of "Ivory for Felicitas."

Heuser was obliged to return to Germany when the economic crisis penetrated even into Africa and he could not make his farm pay. His native scene had changed but he kept his memories of the Dark Continent and the result is this new novel which has had great success in Germany.

The deep gloom of [illegible] Africa is on every page of it. It begins, literally, on a high C and the tempo never changes. Power and lust and danger sweep through it.

A young surveyor, seeking escape from his past, plunges into the mysterious continent. He is given food and shelter by one Riquem. Heuser has a rare gift of projecting a scene upon his canvas, and causing it to remain in the memory. The two men meet as friends, and end as bitter enemies. The description of their physical fight cannot be matched, given as it is in ghastly detail.

Then there is a picture of a jungle banquet, a scene of barbaric splendor, where the Europeans present felt strangely uncomfortably defenseless, "like snails without their shells." And when the surveyor meets a fellow countryman, one Grahm, he learns from him of some of the terrors that will afflict him if he remains too long in the jungle of Africa.

"Do you know the day will come," he tells the youth, "when you won't be able to endure the loneliness? When you'll scream and claw with your nails in desperation at the bark of the trees to keep yourself from going mad and to give yourself a pain that will keep you from thinking about yourself?" When you'll be thankful to see a white face again, even a face as seared and drawn as mine?"

Yet even Grahm looked upon this as the place to be, he thought of the European continent as a degenerate place, where civilization was about to end. Though the heat of Africa came down like a wolf, men like Grahm remained there. There was a lure, a fascination about the [illegible] with [illegible] and snares.

We learn of the degenerate [illegible] known as The [illegible] and of [illegible] his mysterious [illegible] and counsellor, and we surely hear the sounds of doom that come to us out of the darkness of night, as our hero takes his way over strange paths and beyond tortuous rivers. The savage terror of it gets hold of us, yet the primitive beauty is here like a jewel.

And after his manifold adventures the young surveyor came to see the truth of all that Grahm had told him. "At length he had come to the point of yearning for human company, for men of his own breed; for although there were Negroes enough at hand, there was no bridge between his world and theirs; they could not annul his feeling of isolation." And finally, he vanished into the brushwood on the other shore and never returned again.

Grim, repellent at times, this story gets hold of you. It casts its funeral shadow over the spirit, it actually frightens you with its sinister beauty. The translation has been admirably done by Willa and Edwin Muir.

Women Will Skipper Yachts

One of the important yacht racing events which comes off in the near future will be the race for the Mrs. Charles Francis Adams cup, by the women's championship team. The affair is to be run off at Cohasset this year and Vice-Commodore Charles Higginson and several other club officials will be in charge.

The famous Manchester 17-footers will be used in this event, and in connection with the race, there will be the Cape Cod knockabouts in the girls' event for Mrs. Hugh Bancroft's cup.

For the major national race of the day, Rhode Island has asked permission to send a crew as they did last year when Miss Sara T[illegible] of the Bristol Yacht Club competed.

At present five crews have entered for the Adams cup, one each for the three Massachusetts districts, one from Long Island Sound, and the Rhode Island crew.

It is expected that Miss Lorna Whittelsey, of the Indian Harbor Yacht Club, will be the representative for Long Island Sound, which has won two legs already for this coveted trophy.

Mrs. Peabody to Speak on Hoover

Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, militant dry crusader who left her Beverly estate and took up her residence in Florida on the repeal of the Baby Volstead act, will deliver her opinion of President Hoover's prohibition stand at Rumney, N. H., today.

"Mr. Hoover—the lost leader" is the subject of the address she plans to deliver today at the New England Fellowship conference.

Chatty Notes of Summer Resorts

MISS ALICE BURR, DAUGHTER of Mr. and Mrs. I. Tucker Burr, Jr., of Needham, will spend the coming winter studying in Europe. She is at present with her parents at their summer estate at Wareham. Her mother is officiating as one of the judges at the Cohasset Horse Show and is the Master of the Dedham Hunt.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT STOW BRADLEY, who have been staying at the Drake Hotel, New York, since there arrival recently from Europe, have now returned to their estate at Pride's Crossing.

COUNTESS FERDINAND COLLOREDO - MANSFELD has as her guest, at the Ritz Tower, Park ave. and 57th st., New York, Miss Mabel B. Bradley of Boston.

AT THE BRADFORD ARMS, Sagamore Beach, a reception will be given for Bishop William F. Anderson, D. D., L. L. D., and Mrs. Anderson, next Friday evening, Aug. 19th, in recognition of their becoming citizens of Cape Cod, and residents of Buzzard's Bay.

MR. AND MRS. REGINALD FOSTER, of Thorncliff, Manchester, are expecting their daughter, Dr. Ruth Foster, towards the end of the month when she returns to this country. Their daughter is now a fully accredited physician, she has also completed a course of study at the London Hospitals, England, and after a short vacation will be reporting for her professional duties in Baltimore.

Monson Woman Is Found by Searchers

Monson, Aug. 15—After being missing since Saturday afternoon Miss Sarah Parker, 57, was found exhausted in the Wales road by Mrs. Elsie Grimes of Palmer, one of about 100 searchers. She was taken to her home in East Hill, about four miles from the place where she was found. Miss Parker went blueberrying and became lost.

Cohasset Plans Horse Show Features

In connection with the great event for this week, the Cohasset Horse Show, August 17 to 20, at Deer Hill, a number of interesting new features are to be introduced, of which The Log Cabin, erected on the grounds as a gift shop, will be an interesting attraction.

Invited Guests

Mrs. F. Harold Tolman is making all the arrangements, and will be in charge of the Gift Shop, assisted by Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, Sr., Mrs. Thomas M. James, Mrs. Andrew Washburn, Mrs. William Gagnebin and Mrs. L. H. Gilson.

Out of town friends who will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Tolman during the horse show will be Miss Margery Danforth, who is competing, Mr. Edward King of N. Y., who is officiating again this year as the ring master, and Mr. Edward Farre, of New York, who will be judging the harness classes.

Mrs. William Cox, who is in charge of the sale of ringside boxes, is also in charge of the Rustic Tea House, another innovation this year, which has been set up close to the ring.

Program Girls

Mr. and Mrs. William Cox have invited Mrs. William H. Moore and her granddaughter, Miss Polly Moore, as house guests for the event.

The programs will have serial numbers attached for which a draw will be held. Among those selling the programs there will be Miss Edith Allen, Miss Alma and Mary Bird, Miss Virginia Badger, Miss Martha Chapin, Miss Mabel Be[illegible], Mrs. John Coolidge, Miss Anne Davidson, Miss Dorothea Dean, Miss Katherine Johnson and Miss Constance and Frances Rogers.

"AS TO A FRIEND" -:- -:- Drawn by Nell Brinkley

A Word!
A Word!
I confess!
1932

THE JUDGE sits in his chamber harkening with both ears while "under the rose" as to a friend, damosels confess to romantic passages of the past. And he hears something, that one.

Only "a word—a word—;" but what unexpected trifles, tender tinsel, childish, dead but undying are brought to light in those words. At some ardent whispers the Judge's eyes pop and his [illegible] wave; at others a tiny tear glistens in the gold of his lashes; at still others he laughs aloud, "ho ho ho!" for every one he [illegible] that he may not miss the faintest far-fetched episode.

If you [illegible] one of the Fair (or even just so-so), can't [illegible] look back down the long-walk of your sentimental life and find some odd and astonishing [illegible] there? [illegible] A boy [illegible] with a brown [illegible] and a black [illegible] Sport [illegible] the w[illegible] you remember [illegible] older [illegible] drove a black [illegible] horse [illegible] they are [illegible] derful to little girls and who never know. NELL BRINKLEY

The Marry-Go-Round

Midsummer Sweethearts

By HELEN ROWLAND

IT IS ALMOST as hard for one summer romance a season as it would be for a woman to get along with only one beach ensemble.

The girl with plenty of sex-appeal can get almost any man on her list, perhaps; but it takes a lot of emotional appeal plus some financial appeal, to get his name on the dotted line of a marriage certificate these days.

S[illegible] brings everything to surface and this big financial s[illegible] is going to enable us to skim off all the lightweights, four-flushers, bounders, false alarms and tin-horn sports which have encumbered society for the last decade and made life such a bore for the rest of us.

A man's love may survive a redhot quarrel; but what takes all the heart and enthusiasm out of him is a woman's determination to go back, dig it up and warm it over every few days.

Life, the average man feels, would be so much simpler and sweeter if one woman would only be reasonable" about the OTHER woman.

TO GET ALONG WITH ONLY ONE SUMMER ROMANCE

It is the easiest thing in the world for a man to make a woman believe that he loves her, after that it is no trouble at all for her to persuade herself that she loves HIM.

• • •

A man loves a woman only as long as he finds her lovable—or until he finds some other woman more lovable. B[illegible] a woman is supposed to go on automatically loving her husband until the judge tells her to stop.

UNTIL THE JUDGE TELLS HER SHE CAN STOP

Heat makes everything expand e[illegible] the masculine heart. That's why it can always accommodate two or three girls at a time in the midsummer moonlight season.

• • •

All that a tired married man need do to satisfy his wife's soul hunger these days is to turn on the radio and get a crooner. Oh, these modern conveniences!

Love Is Half Battle, Says Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 26 years old [illegible] I am in business for myself [illegible] I am deeply in love w[illegible] own age and [illegible]

I have known [illegible] two years and [illegible] kind to me and treated me as they do their own son. Whenever I visit the family of my girl friend, I take them all to the theater or to [illegible] But late[illegible] mother and father d[illegible] like me as they used to, and d[illegible] her to come to my store. I know that the girl loves me just the same, but I have heard that her parents wish to marry her to a doctor or an attorney. I love this girl very much, and will do anything to win her. Please tell me what to do.

K.

Dear K: Well [illegible] friend, "the girl [illegible] more than half the battle isn't it?" And the parents will have a hard time in marrying the young lady to an attorney or a doctor particularly as there seems to be no specific profes[illegible] in view. They just think a [illegible] of that sort would be desirable.

Just bide your time, continue to be agreeable to the girl's parents.

A Question of Illness in the Family

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been going with a young man for almost a year and we intend to get married, but the brother of my fiance has been sick for nine months and has to be cared for. My fiance is planning to send him home to Europe, where his mother lives, but the doctor says he will not be able to travel for a couple of months yet.

Everything would be satisfactory, but the sick brother has a sweetheart who is 15 years older than he is, and she does not like the idea of his being sent back to Europe. I hesitate to be married under these circumstances.

HELENE.

Dear Helene: If the doctor thinks the patient will be able to stand the voyage in two or three months, it seems to me that you personally have no further responsibility in the case. The problem is squarely up to the doctor.

Latest Fad for Dressing Neck

A NEW FINISH to the collarless neckline is made by using necklaces. Thus the neckline of a black coat was completed by a necklace of heavy ivory rings strung on a coarse black silk cord. A beige frock is finished by a strand of bronze medallions on a black cord.

NEW TIE-UPS are noted in color schemes. For instance with a frock of white silk organdie spotted in medium blue is worn a jacket of matching blue crepe spotted in white.

WHY NOT an evening bag of lace? The answer is to be found in a lovely round pouch made entirely of black chantilly lace petals mounted on a frame of gilt set with pearls.

Cooking Green Corn

Tempting Dishes From Left-Overs

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Monday morning broadcast over Station WAAB

PAGING MARTHA LEE! [illegible] after [illegible] to find her [illegible] Concord and Boston [illegible] family's daily quota of green corn. There's a legend in the Lee family that Martha, aged six [illegible] her affection for her father [illegible] said, "Oh, Daddy, I love you better than green corn, or ice cream or God!"

In those days, only time enough to "shuck" the corn elapsed between the time of it's picking and its immersion in the boiling salted and sugared water. And six minutes by the clock was the outside limit for the boiling. Except towards the end of the season when older and tougher, it was allowed 10 minutes and [illegible] Overcooked corn from which all juice and sweetness has been boiled away is one of [illegible] committed in the name of American housewifery all too often.

Buttered and salted, or spread with a thin coating of mayonnaise, corn is perfection eaten right from the cob, which is all there ever is left in the Lee family. But if you're lucky enough to have any cold boiled corn left over, here are some nice ways to use it up.

LUNCHEON CORN

2 cupfuls corn.
1 tsp. salt.
¼ tsp. paprika.
2 tbsps. butter.
1½ cups thin cream.
Whole milk or stewed tomato.
1 tsp. sugar.
Toast.
Parsley.

Cut the corn off the cob and cook for 5 minutes after it begins to boil in the cream, milk or tomato, or add 2 cups of cold cooked corn to the cream. Season with the salt, paprika, sugar and butter. Turn into a shallow dish lined with hot, thin, buttered toast. Garnish with a picket fence of toast points, standing up around the edge, and place a sprig of parsley between the p[illegible] [illegible] at the last moment.

CORN AU GRATIN

1 cup cooked corn, cut from cob green pepper
2 tbsps. butter or cooking oil
¼ tsp. paprika
1 tbsp. minced onion
1 tsp. salt
1 cup steamed rice
½ cup grated cheese
2 egg yolks

Drain the corn and chop [illegible] fine. Add to this the egg yolks well beaten. Saute the green pepper, minced fine, and the minced onion in the oil, and add to the above mixture with the salt and paprika. Fold the rice into the corn mixture very lightly with a fork. Turn into a greased casserole, sprinkling half the grated cheese on the mixture as a center layer and the remaining cheese on top. Bake in hot oven for 12 minutes.

CORN FRITTERS

1 egg
½ cup milk
2 cups corn, cut from cob
1½ cups flour
2 tsps. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
Dash pepper
2 tsps. melted shortening

Beat the egg and add remaining ingredients. Beat well, drop by spoonfuls into hot fat and cook until golden brown. Time in frying, 3 minutes. Temperature, 380 deg. 16 fritters.

Daily True Story

Unwanted Freedom

BILL HANNEVELT was a typical grumbling artist. He had failed to reach the highest pinnacle of his ambition—to become a renowned painter. Of course, he was still young and there was hope. But Bill couldn't see it through.

For Bill had committed what he considered in his more despondent moments a grave sin [illegible] he had married a poor girl.

It is difficult for the average human being to understand the mental processes of an artistic temperament. But the fact is that Bill had been madly in love with Ruth Paxton when the two in a moment of ecstasy joined fates together. And what may seem even a trifle irrational—Bill was still ardently affectionate toward Ruth.

But their love did not further Bill's ambitions. On the other hand Bill felt that it had become the graveyard of his hopes. For before the marriage Bill had experimented [illegible] and [illegible] toward great masterpieces. Now he was compelled [illegible]

So Bill painted drab faces of fat and overfed [illegible] rich and was compelled (for business reasons) to make them look as delicate [illegible] flowers. Bill's paint brush removed [illegible] deep furrows [illegible] arch express[illegible] to lusterless eyes and transformed [illegible]

A year thus passed with the oil paintings still unfinished. He remembered the anniversary of their separation. A vision of Ruth haunted him. She had been kind, considerate, always looking after his practical needs. He wondered where she was.

He climbed down from the garret—to work his mood off. He recognized the handwriting—

"Bill, though we haven't met in a year—I have been thinking of you. I have visited many a painting gallery hoping to see your work there. How are you progressing? Love—from your invisible Ruth."

He fingered the [illegible] and brought it [illegible] his face. It seemed to him as if the letter ga[illegible] the subtle scent that was Ruth. A pang of realization [illegible] through him. GARBO IN SWEDEN AND LA GARBO IN FRANCE

By GILBERT SELDES

AT THE MOMENT I write this, Greta Garbo is on board the Gripsholm scheduled to pass us in a day or so, and the director of [illegible] on board our ship, has received a wireless telling him that New York newspapers have sent reporters on the trip, to wireless daily reports of Garbo's activities. I gather then that she has finally made good her permanent threat to go home, and that her going has caused excitement. I can believe it, for when I sailed, two months ago, at least a thousand men and women stood around the Swedish-American docks, in spite of the large signs announcing that "Greta Garbo is not sailing today." Even we, on the boat, doubted these signs and eyed the [illegible] I am glad she wasn't with us. I like a peaceful time on board, with no outside interests.

The advantage of belonging to a rich and dominant nation—an advantage I hope we are not going to lose—is that we can impose ourselves on our weaker contemporaries. We can take Garbo from them and send her back mutilated and the Swedes can take it or not—but they'd better take it. It would be a surprising [illegible] thing for us to have to translate Garbo back into English if we want to see her next picture. And I, for one, would want to see it.

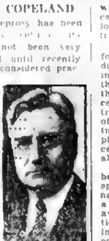
LEPROSY NOW CURABLE

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

ALTHOUGH leprosy has been known for many [illegible] its treatment has not been very satisfactory, and until recently the disease was considered practically hopeless. Hence it is gratifying to learn that many cases of leprosy are now responding to a new form of treatment.



Dr. Copeland

The disease was misunderstood for many years. Indeed, it was not until 1871 that the causative germ was discovered. "Bacillus lepra" is the germ that causes leprosy.

Contrary to common belief, leprosy is not highly contagious, actual contact with the leper being necessary for contraction of the disease. There are individuals particularly doctors and missionaries, who have been closely associated with lepers for many years but have not taken the disease. It is believed that when modern sanitation and careful rules of hygiene are followed the disease is not easily transmitted from one [illegible]

Today there are model colonies for the care and study of this disease, and to these the afflicted individual goes not with the thought of dying there, but with the knowledge that he will receive the very latest scientific treatment for leprosy, with hope of a cure. Indeed, many have returned from these colonies completely cured of a disease that for centuries was considered incurable.

Isolation is still considered the best method of preventing the spread of leprosy, but unfortunately many individuals who have a mild form of leprosy are unaware of the affliction. In addition to being a menace to other individuals, these unsuspected cases may reach an incurable stage, due to lack of proper treatment.

As a result of continuous experimental work, a certain preparation of "chaulmoogra" oil was found to be very beneficial in the treatment of leprosy. This oil, obtained from an oriental tree, is subjected to a refining process and sterilized, then injected hypodermically. The duration of the treatment depends upon the severity of the disease.

CASS FIDGETED [illegible]

"I suppose so," he said helplessly. "I was a bit surprised myself, I must admit, but there you are—it's Sondra's own business and Merriman's a decent fellow."

TERRIBLY ILL

"And he is so terribly ill," Beatrice [illegible] "They say it will be months before he is fit and well again—if ever he is."

Cass made an elaborate business [illegible] lighting a cigarette.

"Oh, he'll get all right again," he said cheerfully. "He's young and as strong as a horse. People don't die so easily."

"They never die when they're expected to," Beatrice answered.

He looked at her suspiciously. "What does that mean?" he asked bluntly.

She [illegible] little mirror which she took from her hand-bag.

"Well between you and me and the door-post, Sondra made a mistake when she married him. Of course I know you won't let it go any further or I shouldn't be telling you, but she was down at the shore in Mr. Anderson's house there, only a week or two before poor Mark came home."

"Well?" Cass said bluntly. "John often lends his house to friends; why shouldn't Sondra have it?"

"No reason at all, of course, only I don't imagine that he generally stays there at the same time, does he? I looked in one day for a cup of tea when—" she laughed "They seemed very happy—at least, we interrupted quite an emotional little scene. Poor darling Sondra was crying."

CASS REDDENED

Cass flushed and stared down at the floor. He wanted to get up and go but it seemed difficult and he could think of no adequate excuse. Beatrice smiled with satisfaction as she noticed his embarrassment. "Don't think I'm blaming Sondora"—she said. "I simply adore Mr. Anderson myself, and it is bad luck, isn't it?"

"What is?" Cass asked bluntly.

"That she should have made such a mistake. You see, I'm her best friend and she does tell me lots of things she wouldn't tell anyone else! They'll be so poor—poor Mark hasn't a cent and unless Mr. Anderson does the sporting thing and goes on giving Sondra an allowance, I simply can't imagine what they'll do."

"Look here—" Cass said, rousing himself with an effort. "I don't think we ought to talk about them like this—it's their own affair after all. And I'm sure Anderson has never given any woman an allowance—not a woman who wasn't his wife, I mean—" he floundered helplessly. "Sondra must have money of her own—can't dress and go about as she does on nothing a year, you know."

Beatrice laughed cruelly.

"My dear man, she hasn't a cent, take it from me. Flora used to give her money when she was living with that dreadful Ben, but I know for a fact that since she went away, supplies have been cut off. Of course, I'm full of sympathy for her, but all the same—if Mark ever finds out what the true position is—"

Cass broke in sharply: "I don't see how he can find out, unless he is told."

Beatrice powdered her nose thoughtfully. "Things always come out, don't you think?" she asked cattily. "Especially things you want kept quiet. It's a nasty little way they have."

Cass fidgeted with his tie. He knew there was a lot of truth in [illegible] it was nobody's business certainly not hers. A fine "best friend" she was to Sondra, he thought grimly.

"I went to see Merriman yesterday," he said after a moment. "He's in a hospital, you know. Didn't look so bad, I thought—a bit thin and white, but the chap's been ill. Always liked Merriman myself."

SHE LOVES HIM

"I simply love him," Beatrice agreed. "But I can't help seeing that it was a mistake for Sondra to marry him."

"I suppose we all do things on the impulse sometimes—" Beatrice sighed. "I very nearly eloped myself once. So thankful I didn't though!"

"Sondra seemed devoted enough to Mark," Cass said bluntly, and he wondered if it was not possible for him to warn Sondra that this girl was anything but the friend she pretended to be.

Most women were cats he decided thank the Lord he had managed to escape their clutches.

"Sondra is simply wonderful," Beatrice agreed with enthusiasm. "I'm going to tea with her this afternoon—Mark is allowed visitors, you know, and he says I always cheer him up."

"By the way—" Cass said with a desperate effort to turn the conversation. "What has become of Mrs. Lomax?"

"I really don't know—I always thought myself that she must have gone away with Jocelyn Farr, but that can't be right, because he's still in town."

"I don't see why, because a woman chooses to leave her husband, it must necessarily be with another man," Cass objected.

Beatrice laughed. "You dear funny old thing—what other reason could there be?"

He shrugged his shoulders helplessly. "I don't understand women," he said. "Seems to me they're a rum lot."

He was unutterably thankful when Beatrice said she must go. He breathed a great sigh of relief as she joined a party of friends who had just come in.

A nasty, dangerous girl, that's what she was, he decided, he hoped devoutly she would not make it her business to talk to every one as she had just done to him. Of course he had always known that John was in love with Sondra—but—well, if she didn't wish to marry him and preferred another fellow, it couldn't be helped.

Blondie of the Follies

By Frances Marion

"Are you kidding?" Pratt was annoyed.

"I wouldn't kid anyone, would I?"

"Not much!" said Blondie, as Pratt turned away in a huff.

"Listen you—watch your step," said Larry seriously, when Pratt was out of earshot. "You're a nice kid . . . you think I wasn't on the level last night . . . I'm very fond of you, Blondie . . ."

"I mean decently . . . decently fond of you." Larry was very much in earnest now, and he spoke quickly. Blondie watched him closely.

"If it doesn't mean anything—why about you and Lurline?"

"That's over." Blondie looked at him angrily.

"Oh, I hate you! I wish I'd never met you."

"I told you—that's over!" Larry said emphatically.

"Since when?"

"Today."

"Why?"

NOT TRUTHFUL

"I won't say it was because of you—because it wasn't altogether but truthfully, last night decided me . . ." and Larry suddenly seized both her arms, looking her squarely in the eyes.

"Break!" They both turned at the sound of Lurline's voice. "What's the idea?" she asked.

"I'm going home," said Larry, glaring at her.

"What's keeping you . . . good night," said Lurline, sarcastically.

Larry started to reply thought better of it, and stalked away, leaving the two girls alone.

"No . . ."

"You know—I don't want to like him—but I do . . ."

"Suppose I was through . . ." emotionally Lurline was almost at the breaking point. ". . . supposing we were washed up—would you like him for yourself?" Lurline looked at Blondie narrowly.

"Lottie, don't be silly!"

"Come on—you can tell me."

"Well, I don't know . . ."

"Come on, we're pals. You can tell me . . ." Lurline cajoled.

"I tell you I don't know!" Blondie insisted.

The answer turned loose all Lurline's pent-up emotion. Unable to control herself any longer she slapped Blondie in the face.

"You dirty little double-crosser . . . don't you ever speak to me again!"

BLONDIE STUNNED

Blondie was stunned. For the first time in her life she [illegible] capable of taking the challenge of battle. Standing perfectly still she watched Lurline [illegible] away.

In a rage Lurline dropped into a [illegible] She was [illegible] failed to overhear Larry and Pratt [illegible]

"Why home?" asked Pratt.

"Tired," said Larry, noncommittal.

"You weren't very friendly just now."

"You won't get anywhere with that kid—let me tell you that—good night!" and Larry turned away angrily.

As he passed Lurline she [illegible] up.

"Good night, Larry," she said, brokenly. He looked down at her.

"I'll take care of that money thing in the morning. Good night!" and he went down the ladder.

"Good night" called Lurline, just as Pratt stepped up.

"What's wrong with Larry?" he asked.

"Blondie trouble," replied Lurline.

"I thought so. What about her?"

"She's green! She'd bore the daylights out of a man with brains—like you," and Lurline looked up at him with her most captivating smile.

"I like to be bored by people like that . . ." The approach of several girls cut him short, and when they surrounded the yacht owner Lurline arose and went toward the bar.

STANDING ALONE

Blondie takes to life in Follies like a duck to water. Thrills coming tomorrow.

Financial Market News, Notes and Comment

BIG DEVELOPMENTS IN BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES

Almost complete elimination of what was the awesome mountain of government-owned wheat overhanging the market is now followed by prospects of a cotton crop one-third smaller than last year's.

These are developments of powerful importance.

Oil Industry Ready to Advance

The oil industry, farflung in its influence and ramifications, has apparently succeeded in setting its house in order after years of condemnable demoralization.

This, too, is important economically.

The copper industry, vital to certain states, has received the protection of a four-cent-a-pound tariff, riotous domestic overproduction has been arrested, the largest foreign producers are reported to have reached a marketing modus vivendi, quotations for the metal, after sinking to absurd depths, are advancing.

This likewise is of no slight importance.

Ruinously low prices have brought about drastic curtailment of rubber production in the world's principal fields; the market value of raw rubber consequently has increased very substantially, adding many millions to the inventories of rubber manufacturers.

This also is not unimportant.

Lamont Appointment Boon to Steel

The steel industry, too long plagued by cut-throat price-cutting, has agreed to the appointment of ex-Secretary of Commerce Lamont as active head of the Iron and Steel Institute, with the idea of having him become a sort of overlord, or conciliator or umpire—what has been popularly dubbed a "czar" or "dictator."

This move may lead to far-reachingly beneficial results.

Eastern railroads have received official blessing on their planned mammoth consolidations, and Western railroads propose to appoint a functionary similar to Lamont.

The country's strongest banking interests plan to encourage and finance the purchasing of agricultural commodities and other raw materials by manufacturers small as well as large.

Hitherto the efforts of one or two gigantic banks to induce customers to borrow for such a purpose have borne meager fruit, but the new [illegible] group, so influentially officially and financially indorsed, stands a fair chance of achieving something worth while.

Easy Money Relief for Real Estate

Real estate has suffered extremely acutely since borrowing became practically impossible.

The organization of eight to twelve governmentally sponsored home loan banks, supplemented by the lifting of the ban on lending by a number of strong banks, should, if prudent courage be exercised, afford welcome, stimulating relief in many sections of the country.

Quotations for grains, cotton, pigs, cattle, sheep, hides, eggs, butter, lard have lately added hundreds of millions to the total value of our farm products.

The importance of this needs no stressing.

Within the last five weeks the gain in the quoted value of stocks and bonds throughout the country has approached ten thousand million dollars—ten billions. On the New York Stock Exchange alone stocks recovered approximately five billions during July, bonds advanced more than a billion and a quarter, on every security exchange throughout the length and breadth of the land quoted values bounded up briskly, and August has brought notable additional gains.

The rapid creation of so much additional "wealeh," so much additional borrowing power, is self-evident.

Gold Outflow Reversed

The gold outflow, which reached unparalleled volume, has been transformed into a gold inflow which promises to increase our banks' lending facilities two or three billions.

Europe, which not so long ago could not sell its American investments fast enough, has since been a consistent buyer.

These international developments are of genuine importance.

So, maybe, the betterment in sentiment is not as inexplicable as pessimists and bears would have us believe.

May it not be that we have finally reached the bend in the long downhill [illegible]?

CURB MARKET TONE FIRMER

New York, Aug. 15 (INS) A firmer tone was apparent on the curb exchange today to mark the opening of the new week. Price movements were irregular, however, and changes were small and of little [illegible].

Electric Bond and Share [illegible] strengthening [illegible] leading a [illegible] firm [illegible]. Cities Service was off slightly while American Superpower was unchanged. American Gas & Electric was easy.

The oil shares showed scattered pressure with Gulf Oil and Standard Oil of Indiana declining fractionally. Curtis Manufacturing A held steady.

The Aluminum Co. of America displayed a subdued tone after the pyrotechnics of last week and [illegible] lower.

Volume of trading was off considerably from the active session of last week and traders showed a tendency to wait on the [illegible] pending developments.

The movements on the curb paralleled those o nthe big board in the absence of special news to influence them.

Cotton Cloth Sales Exceed Production

New York, Aug 15 (AP) July sales of carded cotton cloths were [illegible] per cent of output during the month, figures compiled by the New York Association of Cotton Textile Merchants today showed.

Sales totaled 226,616,000 yards. Unfilled orders increased 33.4 per cent. Meanwhile, there was a reduction of 7.8 per cent in stocks. Billings amounted to 165,874,000 yards or 116.8 per cent of production.

—STATE ST.— Hears:

That it is felt in some quarters that the market is not altogether done on the upside. Those who are bearishly inclined realize the public is still willing to sell and they are not going to place themselves in a trap. Sharp, erratic fluctuations are likely to rule while the public short following is being scared away.

Eliminating Deadwood

Many brokers are urging their clients to examine their lists with an eye to advantageous eliminations. Cash realized in this way can then be held pending lower levels when it is suggested the more promising equities can be picked up.

Motors in particular are being eliminated. The theory behind this is that the season is nearly over and the group will not be subject to special influences until around show time. Obviously speculative appeal will not be present until early December.

Other shares which brokers suggest selling at this time can [illegible] be summed up as favorites of another day. These shares which played large parts in 1929 engender false hopes among investors. It is better to look for new and more promising situations.

Odds and Ends

Regardless of personal [illegible] concerning the present [illegible] there is no mistake [illegible] want to [illegible] mix the market and business. [illegible] ahead of [illegible] with [illegible] business hopes.

[illegible] erroneous ways of the [illegible] setback is probably the best thing that could have happened. A wild, exuberant stock market would disturb serious-minded business men and industrialists and place a halt on their plans for expansion.

The amateur financial [illegible] who has perhaps missed the [illegible] move can console himself with the thought that a great banker is in the same boat. He is looking to a pickup in car loadings, steel tonnage and construction [illegible] and then he stays on the [illegible].

Ticker Talk

The Chesapeake & Ohio only big carrier [illegible] dividend, holds its meeting [illegible]. The Street wonders if the company will stretch a point in order to continue feeding the Alleghany Corp. much needed nourishment.

Boardman gossip has it that farmers are going on a [illegible] strike . . . In the event the commodity markets falter this week shorts should be wary of such propaganda. . . . All in all, traders in the various markets should adopt a cagey attitude.—H. F. P.

Imports of Leather Down 56 Per Cent

Washington, Aug. [illegible]—[illegible] States during the first six months of 1932 [illegible] tanned goods valued at $[illegible] which amount leather [illegible] contributed 45.7 per cent, leather [illegible] was 40.9 per cent, and other manufactures of leather 13.4 per cent.

As compared with the corresponding period of 1931, the value of the imports declined by 56.4 per cent. The volume of trade also decreased. The number of pairs of boots and shoes decreased by 59 per cent, leather slippers and moccasins 43 per cent and leather gloves 42.7 per cent. Footwear with fabric uppers increased 122 per cent in the number of pairs imported.

July's Bond Sales Lowest in 5 Years

Sales of state and municipal bonds for the month of July, 1932, amounted to $[illegible], which was the lowest for any July during the last five years, as shown by figures compiled by the Commercial and Financial Chronicle.

This compares with $46,766,[illegible] for the same month last year, with $112,258,085 for the corresponding month of 1930, with $85,114,065 for July, 1929, and with $80,799,070 for July, 1928.

For the first seven months of 1932 state and municipal bond sales amounted to $552,565,411. This was a decrease of $395,389,251, as compared with the same period last year.

UTILITIES ARE STILL AHEAD AS 'LEGALS'

By FRANK H. MELOON

It was recently pointed out in this column that for the past week only public utility bonds had been added to the list of legal investments for savings banks by Bank Commissioners Arthur Guy and Sumner N. Annis in Massachusetts and Maine. The same now [illegible] true for a period of two weeks. The latest addition Mr. Guy sends is Southern Indiana Gas & Electric Co. first mortgage gold [illegible] bonds of 19[illegible].

MARKET VIEWS OF BROKERS

Theodore Prince & Co.: We look to the bond market to tell us whether or not the trend is changing. As long as bonds continue in an up trend, particularly the more speculative issues, we feel that the outlook for equities is improving.

Shields & Co.—Somewhat further irregularity is to be expected marketwise [illegible] trading groups combat constructive efforts. The buying side continues to offer most attraction, however, while sharp shakeouts should be taken advantage of to assume a position for the [illegible] in the stocks that will benefit most from improved sentiment on the part of the buying public.

Hornblower & Weeks: Until subsequent rallies indicate definitely their inability to penetrate the high levels registered the early part of last week we would continue to treat current reactionary tendencies as a purely technical affair and anticipate a resumption of the main upward trend by mid week.

E. A. Pierce & Co.: We think that a rally will develop which will perhaps approach recent highs but which will not carry the market into new high ground.

Clark, Childs & Keech: We would buy stocks today if further weakness develops. We would not buy on strength.

DIVIDEND WILL BE PAID WITH WHISKEY

New York, Aug. 15 (AP)—Stockholders of the National Distillers Products Corp., who for several months have heard rumors that they might be paid a special dividend, were informed today that their hopes would come true.

A special dividend will be paid in warehouse receipts for whiskey, [illegible] aged mellow [illegible] year whiskey.

The distribution of this liquid dividend will be made in [illegible] it was announced today by Seton Porter, president of the company. [illegible]

Due to the long period during which prohibition has been in effect there seems to be a popular misconception regarding what constitutes good whiskey, said Porter in a statement which is now being mailed to shareholders.

The raw spirits which are initially manufactured, assuming the use of the best materials and methods of distillation, are gradually transformed into whiskey only by aging under proper conditions and as is generally recognized steadily improve with age. All of the company's large inventory of whiskey manufactured prior to prohibition and not yet bottled has thus been aged in the wood for 15 years or more. [illegible] has now been reduced to about 700,000 cases.

Columbia Gas Net Is 22 Cts. a Share

New York, Aug. 15 (AP) Columbia Gas & Electric Corp. and subsidiaries report for the quarter ended June 30 net income of $4,099,[illegible] after estimating dividend requirements on the preferred stocks, [illegible] to 22 cents a share [illegible] the June quarter 1931.

Net income for the 12 months ended June 30, 1932, was $18,530,661, equal after preferred dividends to $1.09 a share on the common stock, compared with $24,010,387 or $1.55 a share in the 12 months ended June 30, 1931.

—SPECTATOR— Says:

There is a much healthier tone to the market as the new week opens.

Speculative exuberance has been given a much-needed "spanking," the "sky's the limit" broadcasts have been stifled, and sanity is back.

It would be a good thing now if the market paused for a few days, while a new perspective of things is attained; then, possibly, with some fresh encouragement from trade or commodities, another phase of the advance could be started.

STOCKS HIGHER IN WALL ST. DEALINGS

New York, Aug. 15—Important shares were generally higher under execution of an accumulation of buying orders over the weekend in trading on the New York Stock Exchange today.

Gains of a point or two spread over a broad list, with trading at the smallest volume in some time, but with selling pressure obviously lifted.

SOME OF LEADERS

Leaders that showed a speedy rise of 1 to 3 points included American Can, both U. S. Steel issues, American Telephone, Auburn, New York CSentral, Atchison, Union Pacific, J. I. Case, du Pont, Krogery Stores, California Standard and Corn Products.

A few good-sized blocks appeared on hte tape, notably in General Motors and du Pont.

With the third week of August at hand, and only two weeks left of the vacation season, Will Street was more than ever on the alert for tangible signs of the usual autumn upswing in business, which should become fully manifest after Labor Day.

Weekend advices indicated little change in the steel industry, but some wholesale drygoods merchants reported the best business in two years, as retailers stocked up for the autumn business.

Wheat continued to attract much attention in the financial district. In the last half of last week, it lost roughly half its extreme gain of around 10 cents a bushel from the June lows. The sag in wheat precipitated widespread profit-taking in stocks, and came at a time when aggressive bullish activity in that staple had been widely rumored.

In foreign exchanges, the dollar stiffened.

BOND CHANGES NARROW

The bond market showed narrow changes.

Grain futures were moderately higher today. Wheat was up ⅛ to ½c, corn ¼ to ½c and oats steady to ⅛c higher.

The Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey is now in commercial production of oil products by the process of rydrogenation, it was announced today. The products will be turned out from both the Bayway, N. J., and Baton Rouge, La., plants until future plants are constructed.

The company is said to have found that it is possible to produce hydrogenated products on a price basis at least equal to that of products made by the older refining methods. The company acquired the American rights to the hydrogenation process from the German inventors about two years ago.

Wall Street hears that the South Porto Rico Sugar Co. for the fiscal year to end September 30 will show earnings of $1.50 to $1.75 a common share, against $1.20 a share for the previous year.

HOOVER SPEECH AIDS SELLING

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

Copyright, 1932, Universal Service, Inc.

New York, Aug. 15—The anticipated correction of stock market excesses was synchronized with President Hoover's acceptance speech, which sought to express qualified optimism toward the longer term economic future.

To the extent that the state paper had any speculative significance, it seemingly stimulated selling impulses because the President in effect took credit for the administration for some of the attempted remedies against the depression. This attitude stressed the political aspects of the "managed recovery," and apparently advertised its somewhat artificial character. Thus, the bear market tradition that optimism from the White House is a signal for reaction was again fulfilled.

Such unhappy coincidences have doubtless played a part in raising presidential feeling against the wicked bears. But the hard-boiled traders in Wall Street insist that the motive is not to embarrass the President politically, but has to do with the objective fact that forecasts on economic conditions from political sources have not proven accurate.

To an unbiased student of the mechanics of the market, it is apparent that a technical correction was overdue after the flighty new "bull market," and, if one pretext had not arisen, another would have been found.

Steel Mill Operations Up 1 Per Cent for Week

Youngstown, Aug. 15—Steel mill operations in this district during the coming week will start at 14 per cent, up 1 per cent.

Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co.'s operations this week, measured by ingot production, will advance 1 per cent to 12 per cent of capacity, which compares with 37 per cent in the like 1931 week.

Carnegie Steel Co.'s operations in the Mahoning and Shenango Valleys are expected to be unchanged at about 20 per cent of rated capacity, against operations of 46 per cent in the like 1931 week.

Activity of the Steel Corp.'s subsidiary is centered in the Mahoning Valley, since the Shenango Valley mills at Farrell, Pa., and Newcastle, Pa., are practically idle. Carnegie Steel Co.'s Mahoning Valley works shows six out of the 15 open-hearth furnaces melting, with two blast furnaces, the Bessemer plant, bar mills and other units active for the second week since the recent suspension.

Demand for automobile sheets is tapering, but miscellaneous requirements will maintain Carnegie's ingot production unchanged from last week.

Needs of spot and tinplate mills and for bars have been tapering during August, causing the Farrell plant's suspension.

American Sheet & Tin Plate Co.'s plant is operating 20 tinplate mills part of the week, but a declining trend in requirements of car manufacturers is continuing and prospects are for lower production at the district's tinplate plants.

TAUNTON PLANT TO SPEED UP

Taunton, Aug. 15—The Glenwood Range Company with factory and offices here announces today, in a statement from Robert M. Leach, treasurer and general manager, the purchase of the flasks, patterns, trademarks, good-will and business of the Fuller Warren Company, 50-year-old Troy, N. Y., stove manufacturers.

Production in the local plant will increase immediately. Operations recently were stepped up to fuor days a week. It is hoped they will be on a full-time basis before long.

Fullen Warren has made the Stewart fas and coal cooking appliances. Glenwood was started in a barn here by three men 52 years ago with a capacity of four ranges a day. The plant today, the largest in the East, turns out, at capacity, a complete range, cast, assembled and ready to ship, every two minutes.

The company first made coal-burning stoves, developing gas ranges as gas displaced coal for cooking. Combination gas and coal ranges and furnaces also are manufactured.

July Shipments of Alaskan Gold Gain

New York, Aug. 15—Shipments of gold and other Alaskan products during July were heavier both in quantity and value, compared with the preceding month or for July last year. Gold Shipments to the United States were valued at $1,005,443, compared with $793,835 last year, and other products increased in value from $2,516,155 to $2,650,369. These increases were due largely to more activity in gold mining regions and to larger shipments of salmon.

Salaries Reported Raised in Wall St.

New York, Aug. 15 (AP)—Reports in brokerage quarters were that a number of the larger Stock Exchange firms have come to the conclusion the improvement in the market volume is likely to last for some time, and consequently have raised employes' salaries from the very depressed levels which were in effect for a long time before the market turned.

July Shipments of Anthracite Higher

New York, Aug. 15—Shipments of anhracite for the month of July, 1932, as reported to tre anthracite bureau of information, Philadelphia, amounted to 2,460,024 gross tons. Better Feeling Is Aid to Business

By HERRYL S. RUKEYSER

New York, Aug. 15—Aparc from academic niceties, the practical question is how much stimulus will brass tacks business—production and distribution—get from the improved feeling.

It would be stupid to assume that there will be no benefits, provided the speculative advances should be retained.

Unquestionably, the panic psychology, which has been broken, was restraining some of those with means from spending normally. To the extent that they feel richer and to the extent that they believe that the worst is over, they may be expected to spend a larger portion of their available income.

Specifically, a millionaire in Boston long told his friends that he would buy a new automobile when American Telephone reached par. His keeping of his pledge perhaps heartened the industry.

But the great restraint on normal business is the lack of buying power among 8,000,000 workers on the farms, who have been impoverished by low prices, and among 10,000,000 unemployed in the cities. These men and their families have not been indulging in a buyers' strike because of sentiment; they have lacked the wherewithal, and still need something more substantial than psychological improvement.

But the sentimental gains should not be undervalued, for they are a prelude to making effective essential corrective moves.

While a majority of bankers are still painfully severe, a few of the more intelligent ones are carefully making new contracts and friendships, which will inure to the profit of their institutions in the next cycle of prosperity, when all bankers through new business departments will be sending out salesmen to lug in borrowers.

Improved Sentiment Seen Throughout Industry

New York, Aug. 15—In its weekly sumray of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co., of New York, currently comments as follows:

"The improved sentiment noticeable throughout industry since mid-July broadened considerably during the past week, despite the continued failure of aggregate activity to record any perceptible upturn. Particularly has this more optimistic feeling been nurtured by the increasing strength in commodity prices.

"Actual increases in production schedules, however, are still confined to the lighter lines, the products of which go directly to the ultimate consumer. It is becoming more and more evident, moreover, that these lines will receive the major benefit of any actual improvement in total consumption of goods during theremaining months of this year.

"While it is to be expected that gains of seasonal proportions may be forthcoming in the heavier industries during the fall, it is still doubtfull that the momentum necessary to result n a sustained advance of material scope in lines such as steel and automobiles can be accummulated in the short time between now and fall.

"Even in the building industry, the impetus from impending relief measures probably will be gradual, rather than immediate. Although sentiment in the steel industry is optimstic, based on expectations of a seasonal increase in orders, actual incoming business remains of decidedly small proportions. With producers now regulating output in close accord with current demand, it is unlikely that any marked change in average operating rates will be witnessed during the remainder of August."

Duplan Silk Makes a Profit

New York, Aug. 15—Dupan Silk Corp. reports for year ended May 31, net profit of $20,203 after all charges including loss of $22,472 on realty operation of 135 Madison Corp. Net profit does not include $13,602 of undistributed profits of Apex Oriental Corp., which is 50 per cent owned. This compared with net profit, after interest and taxes, of $71,299 for the year ended May 31, 1931.

New York Bank Stocks Higher

New York, Aug. 15—Aggregate value of 16 leading issues of New York City banks was $1,528,895,000 for the week ended Aug. 12, an increase of $14,268,000 over the preceding week. It was also nearly $600,000,000 above the low of $929,895,000 reached on May 31.

N. Y. Central Deficits Shown

New York, Aug. 15 (AP)—New York Central Railroad Co reports for the three months ended June 30 a net deficit of $9,372,297 compared with net income of $4,662,209 in the corresponding period of 1931. For the six months to June 30 there was a deficit of $11,051,148 against net income of $4,517,296.

BREWING CO. IN NEW FINANCING

New York, Aug. 15—Announcement was made today that the Philadelphia Beverage Company has completed negotiations with A. F. Hatch & Co., investment bankers, for new financing, the proceeds of which will be used to extend plant facilities and to provide additional working capital. The company, prior to prohibition, was the third largest manufacturer and distributor of real beer in the Philadelphia territory. The bankers plan an early offering of the company's common stock.

The capitalization of the company upon completion of the financing will consist of 400,000 shares of capital stock, including 237,000 shares to be offered to the public shortly. The company will have no funded debt, bank loans or preferred stock, and no funded debt or preferred stock may be created without the consent of holders of 80 per cent of the outstanding capital stock. Application will be made to list the shares on the New York Curb Exchange.

Operating at only 10 per cent of its brewing capacity in the manufacture of cereal beverages, the company reported net profits of $24,787 for 1931. The certified pro forma balance sheet, after giving effect to the proposed financing, according to the statement of Arthur F. Morton & Co., C. P. A., shows total assets of $2,059,682. Current assets total $508,609, of which $442,427 is cash, and current liabilities total only $54,411.

Beverage Concern Obtains Financing

Announcement was made today that the Philadelphia Beverage Company has completed negotiations with A. F. Hatch & Company, investment bankers, for new financing, the proceeds of which will be used to extend plant facilities and provide additional working capital.

The company, prior to prohibition, was the third largest manufacturer and distributor of real beer in the Philadelphia territory. The bankers plan an early offering of the company's common stock.

The Lamar and Irwin girls played their game of baseball at the park Thursday evening. The girls don't have any luck throwing the ball. It's not likely to come very close to the girl on the base, so the latter will miss it. Of course, the runner will go on, while the girls in the outside team are gathering the ball. After the girls had tried this experiment of throwing to the bases a few times they were inclined to give it up and let the runner steal a base whenever she wanted to.

Two Friends of the Under Dog

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American.

LAST MONTH saw the passing of one of the most courageous, honest and cultured men associated with public life in America in the last quarter of a century. And yet the press had little to say about George Fred Williams when he died. He had never "bent the pregnant hinges of the knee that thrift might follow fawning," and he paid the penalty in the lifted eyebrows of the herd. Years before the end he had ceased to be a political figure. He had refused to bow to Baal and had passed to retirement perfectly happy in the company of his self-respect.

But in 1896, and for some years thereafter, he was one of the most interesting figures in public life. A man of deep culture and comprehensive education, he had entered politics and gone to Congress, where his ability and qualities had given him a position of some distinction. In 1896 he went with Bryan—and that was the unforgiveable sin. He went with Bryan on the broad issue of humanity and equal rights; and never have either counted for less than during the decade that followed the "salvation of the country" under the puritanic leadership of Mark Hanna.

Handsome, With Intellectual Face

I remember him as he was in those days. A boy at the time, I heard him speak more than once. He was a handsome man, large, strongly built, with a fine, keenly intellectual face. He was a master of the best of English and might have been a lecturer at Harvard. He was chaste in the choice of words. No one could hear him without knowing they were in the presence of a man intellectually superior.

That is why he was hated so by those who were "saving the country" with Wall Street's gold. It was maddening, just when the strategy was to picture all the followers of Bryan as uncouth, untrained, vulgar persons who never, never would be admitted to the Union League Club's parlors, to have this man Williams dissipate the story by his mere presence, manner, speech. It was fashionable for a good many years for the newspapers of sweetness and light to sneer at George Fred Williams. They never were to find it easy to take him seriously—he was so serious.

Ran for Governor Several Times

He ran for Governor of Massachusetts on the Democratic ticket several times, always to be defeated, but always to bear the banner with gallantry. He had money, position socially, and he did not require office to be happy. He was that most intolerable type of politician—one who was in politics for a cause.

Then with Wilson's election he was made Minister to Greece. The fact that Bryan appointed him was enough to disturb the sweet serenity of the pure of heart. Most of the newspapers jeered a bit. It was so like Bryan to name a man like Williams to the seat of the ancient culture. The fact that no abler man ever was sent to Greece, and none more cultured or more apt to enjoy the contact with the scenes of the civilization of Pericles, did not count. Had he not been with Bryan in 1896?

If only Bryan had sent to Greece a packer of pigs-knuckles who had contributed liberally to a campaign fund! That would have been in keeping with the dignity of the republic.

Then came the Albanian incident. The Powers were engaged in the usual business of raping a weak and defenseless people in the name of Christian civilization. It was the "old army game." And Williams, who did not care a whoop for his job, and did care a lot about justice and something about liberty, broke into the game with some pointed comments.

The end was that Williams resigned. He felt he had represented his country—the real country—better by his protest than by staying on in the legation in Athens.

And then everyone laughed—it was all so funny.

Might Have Been King of Albania

Somewhere in my papers I have a letter written about this time by Williams to Senator Kern. In this it appears that Williams did not stumble into a diplomatic indiscretion. He walked in, head high, and without dragging his feet. He walked in because he was utterly outraged as an American, with American ideals, by the proceedings in Albania.

The Albanians turned to him as to a deliverer. It was such a remarkable thing that they should find a voice among people in official station. They wanted him to be their King. They would have put him on the throne if he had consented.

And so he returned to Massachusetts and settled down with his books and in the company of his self-respect.

The New York Times in a recent editorial, not unkindly but gently satiric, commented on the similarity in the characters and careers of Williams and John Quincy Adams II. It was a happy comparison and might have been drawn out at greater length than it was.

Both were men of social standing and the highest culture.

Both were orators of an intellectual order and much eloquence.

Both scorned to follow power for personal profit and at the sacrifice of principle.

And both have been given scurvy treatment historically because there are historians capable of "bending the pregnant hinges of the knee that thrift may follow fawning."

In making a study of the mad years following Appomattox in the writing of "The Tragic Era," I discovered John Quincy Adams II for the first time in the newspapers. His were the most prescient and statesmanlike utterances of his time on reconstruction. His speeches were printed at length in all the leading papers and editorialized upon. Even Horace Greeley, on the other side, treated him with respect.

Historians Made No Mention of Him

Like Williams, he was the Democratic nominee for Governor in Massachusetts several times, and in 1872 he was the nominee for Vice-President with Charles O'Conor on the regular Democratic ticket.

But historians just dropped him. No mention at all. A perfect mockery. When the Encyclopedia of American Biography published its first volume and omitted John Quincy Adams II, Allan Nevins, professor of history at Columbia, took the editors severely to task and deservedly, in a review.

There is a striking similarity in Adams and Williams. Both fought for the under dog and paid the penalty.

Winners in Coach Contest to Go on Detroit Trip

Realization of a dream they have cherished for nearly a year is now less than a week away for two boy craftsmen of Massachusetts. Next Sunday they will detrain at Detroit as delegates from theri State to the second annual convention of the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild. At Detroit they will compete with similar winners from the other states and from Canada for the four university scholarships of four years each which are the annual international awards.

ANOTHER PAIR HONORED

The boys are William Langhammer of 76 Shefford st., Springfield, and Matthew Noziek of 439 Franklin st., Springfield, winnners of first junior and first senior awards, respectively, in the $75,000 coach-building competition sponsored by the Boston Evening American and the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild. In addition to the trip, and the opportunity to compete for the scholarship, each has been presented with $100.

Two other Massachusetts boys' coaches have also been sent to Detroit for re-judging in the scholarship competition. They are the work of Jason French of 6 West st., Arlington, and Constant Bouchard of Topsfield, who carried off second state honors in their respective age divisions. Each of these boys also received $100, but attendance at the convention is restricted to winners of first awards. Bouchard and Langhammer shared first honors for the state in the competition of last year.

SCHOLARSHIPS GIVEN

Officials of the Fisher Body Craftman's Guild have prepared a four-day program for the 112 boys attending the convention. The boys will get a first-hand view of the world's automobile capitaal, including trips through famous automobile plants, a visit to the General Motors Proving Ground, and a tour of Henry Ford's Greenfield Village at Dearborn.

Announcement of the four scholarship winners will be made Monday, Aug. 22, at the second annual award dinner of the Fisher Body Craftman's Guild, and will be broadcast over a national hookup as was done last year.

LECTURES ON COOKING

Combining a special advertising campaign with a series of class demonstrations, the Boston Edison Company will operate a program until the middle of December to popularize electric cooking within the Metropolitan Boston area.

Speed and economy have been stressed in the latest electric range models. Appearance has also been given due thought. Colored enamel finishes, chromium platings, temperature and time controls, with other features to make results certain with a minimum of effort, help to place it in the vanguard of major house comforts.

Weekly classes, Thursdays at 10.30 a. m. and Tuesdays at 2.30 p. m., to which the public is invited are now being held at the Edison Home Service auditorium at 39 Boylston st. There, as well as at the district shops, some service experts will demonstrate electric cooking.

After September 15, a business women's class will be added on Monday evenings, 6.30 p. m. at Boylston st. At the same time a series of ten Community Electrical Housekeeping schools, operating two days weekly in different sections of the Edison service area, will be started.

Gossip About People You Know

ELY BACK TUESDAY

Governor Ely, home from a two-weeks' tour of Canada and Northern New England with Mrs. Ely, is expected to be at his desk at the State House next Tuesday.

CAMPBELL PESTERED

Chester I. Campbell of Quincy, member of the governor's council, running for the Republican nomination for lieutenant-governor, has been receiving a lot of telephone calls as a result of propaganda put out by someone to the effect that he might not file his nomination papers. As a matter of record, Campbell filed his papers personally at the State House on August 3.

COMEBACK FOR McLANE

Former Senator Walter E. McLane of Fall River who bossed the Senate for more than a dozen years, until he was defeated a few years ago by the Democrat, William S. Conroy, is trying to make a comeback. He has filed his nomination papers and promises to make a vigorous campaign.

SUPPORT FOR SULLIVAN

Announcement by Henry J. Sullivan of South Boston that he is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Secretary of State, has brought him a large number of supporters from all sections of the Commonwealth. In addition to 15 Greater Boston groups which endorsed his candidacy during the past four days, he has also received pledges of support from organizations in Haverhill, Lawrence, Framingham, Milford, and Worcester.

ASK HELP FOR CANDIDATE

Charlestown supporters of John J. "Broadway" Sullivan, candidate for Governor's Council in the Fourth District, yesterday mailed 700 personal letters to voters of that section, asking them to join with them in their efforts to secure the Democratic nomination for that office for him.

SHIELDS TO GET BACKING

Friends of John J. Shields, of Roxbury, director of the municipal employment bureau, and candidate for sheriff of Suffolk County, are to organize a political club in Ward 8, South End-Roxbury, this week. The group will be known as the "Shields-for-Sheriff Club of Ward 8."

DRIVE FOR REGISTRATION

Members of the Ward Four Democratic Club Back Bay, today launched a drive to register every member of its party residing in that district who is not now on the voting lists. The drive will continue daily until the close of registration for the coming primaries, Aug. 31.

Hoover Seeks to Make Comeback Through the Same Old Ballyhoo

HERBERT C. HOOVER, one time prophet of prosperity, who failed to redeem the Republican party promise of continued and heightened national affluence made four years ago, seeks re-election by expressing anew the SAME OLD BALLYHOO.

As a piece of press agentry for his administration, the President's acceptance address is skillful, even if not convincing.

Sketching a portrait of himself as King Canute sweeping back the tides of depression, Mr. Hoover, neither contrite nor modest, ignores existing conditions and makes no admission of his CHRONICALLY WRONG prophecies and of his BASICALLY ERRONEOUS original diagnosis of the economic malady.

In assessing the blame for building up an unsound structure, the President takes none on himself and his associates for seeking to intervene in the period of inflation with statements containing fatuous optimism on occasions when sane outsiders were trying to repress the irresponsible bull movement, which culminated in October, 1929, and sowed the seeds for subsequent years of agony and distress.

IN spite of the fact that some 10,000,000 persons are walking the streets without employment, the President has the temerity to point to statistics of improved public health.

Until the life cycle of the present generation has been completed, it will be impossible scientifically to assess the full cost of malnutrition and hardship.

Instead of leading the way toward the ultimate abolition of poverty, as promised four years ago, Mr. Hoover has been at the head of the parade at a time when millions of hitherto self-supporting families were pauperized.

UNDER THE HOOVER BANNER, THE AMERICAN STANDARD OF LIVING HAS BEEN MATERIALLY LOWERED.

However, four years ago, the President took credit for the Republican party for the extended period of prosperity.

In one respect the President has lived and learned. Instead of repeating the forecast of March, 1930, that the worst of unemployment would be over in sixty days, the chief executive now conservatively indicates that prosperity will be found AROUND THE CORNER some time within the next four years.

THE President showed remarkable strategic skill in indicating that the country, still facing serious depression, is just beginning to respond to the Hoover remedies, and the inference is that it is essential to the national welfare to keep the great engineer in office for another four years.

AS A MATTER OF FACT, DESPITE THE RECENT RALLIES FROM THE ULTRA DEPRESSED LEVELS OF PANIC AND DESPAIR, THE FUNDAMENTAL BUSINESS INDICES DO NOT SIGNAL RECOVERY.

There is thus far no indication that the Hoover policy of tinkering with symptoms instead of dealing fundamentally with the broad causes of the depression will succeed, even though time, acts of Providence, and the initiative of business men may lift us out of the depression in spite of Hoover.

The disparity between raw material prices and prices for finished goods, which paralyzes trade and deprives millions of employment, persists—and the President cheerfully ignores it.

Furthermore, there is still no indication that the colossal army of the unemployed can be demobilized without a large scale program of public construction, against which Mr. Hoover, who was the ardent advocate of such a plan in former years, has recently turned his back.

* * *

Lest the voting public accept the administration propaganda that it is essential for the national welfare to keep Mr. Hoover in office, it would be well for them to review the accuracy of the President's previous business forecasts and diagnoses, as revealed in his public address.

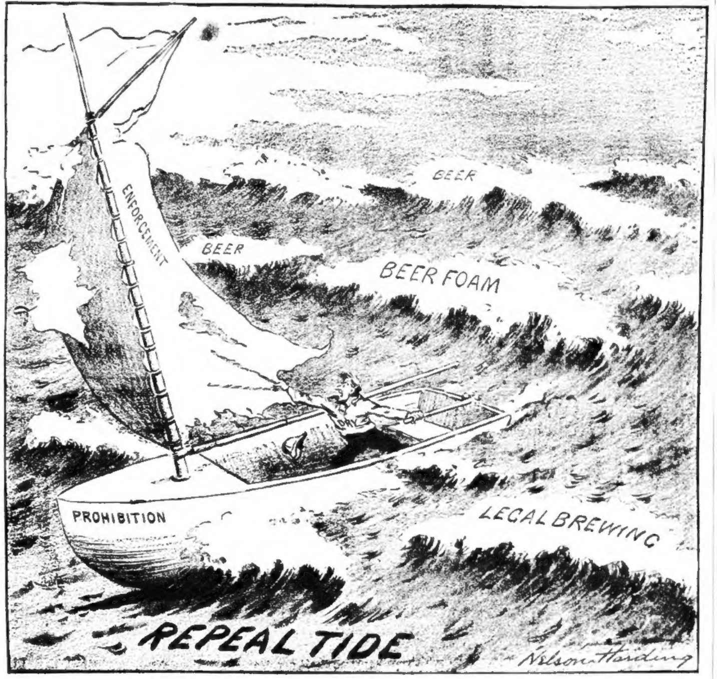
Harding



With mainsail tattered by the gale
The boat is swept along,
It cannot sail against a tide
Now running high and strong.

The rising waves are whipped to froth
And foam flies on the blast.
In such a storm we're wondering
How long the boat can last.

New York Day by Day

Dairy of a Modern Pepys

NEW YORK, Aug. 15—Diary of a modern Pepys: The household in a mighty upset again by the six-weeks-old monkey the comedians, Olsen and Johnson, sent. Nor can I keep from watching its grimaces before a hand mirror. So, breakfasting with H. N. Swanson and tales of his new post in cinemaland.

Working awhile, and reading the most convincing letter ever I received from an old confidence man regarding his belief in immortality. Thence to Ray Long's, a gay group there, including the Hendrick Van Loons, Phil Lennen, James Montgomery Flagg, Mrs. Kent Cooper, Leon and Natalie Gordon.

Benny Fields, crooning when Vallee, Crosby and Columbo were in youknowwhats, was originator of that low-pitched style. In formative days, he salvaged a pickthank existence as a saloon troubadour, in Chicago. From backroom table to table, the soft, melifluous manner was employed. It was especially effective in singing some philanderer with his sweetie out of a five dollar bill. In such artifice was the croon cradled. And now look!

* * *

For the first time in a dozen years, I drove through Long Beach today. In its flourishing day, it was the American Riviera, and while not in eclipse, its lustre has been dimmed. During its proudful sway, the Nassau was crowded at teatime with fashionables. Castles-by-the-Sea was in full step with dancing hordes, and the Trouville bathing pavilion was an endless procession of bathers, excited with the mass passion of being on display. What a spa!

Near the Nassau, in a bright yellow roadster, sat a beautiful young girl in astonishing bathing decollete, and tinged scarlet, with sunshine. From underneath a sky-blue beret, a vagrant curl was rioting in a swift blow of sea air. She made a pretty picture. Somehow—and forgive an antiquarian his whim—I wanted to hear her voice. So I stepped to her car and inquired: "Perhaps you can tell me the quickest way to the Lido?" She glanced at me with eyes of lustrous innocence, murmured: "Perhaps," and left me standing there like a plague-taken old fool.

I just tiptoed to the kitchen for a peek at the monk. He is in a cunning coil with one arm under his head, human fashion, asleep, and contented as a kitten full of milk. From his cage comes an odor, distinctly not jasmine. Ploitering along, I have thought of two names, "Scratch" and "Brandy." Wait a minute, I have it! I caught a certain sideview of him. His name will be Jay Price.

* * *

Movies have made numerous offers to Daniel F. Kerr to portray George Washington roles on the screen. In white wig and knee breeches, he is an amazing likeness. But he will only appear at charity shows. In professional life, he is a police inspector, and was once exalted ruler of New York's Elk Lodge No. 1.

* * *

Speaking of movies, in a balcony the other night, a gentleman with a coryza sat directly behind, coughing in sudden sullen seizures, down my neck. At first opportunity, I moved to another seat and came away with a blob of chewing gum smeared over my trouser seat. There is a touch of life's fatality about these two incidents. Wherever I go lately, I get in one place or another.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Shall We Go Back?

A YOUNG THUG named Stark died recently while undergoing the "third degree" in Nassau County, New York.

Few, I suspect, grieved because he was dead. But many are seriously concerned. There was, as you know, provocation. Stark was one of a party of young ruffians who beat and robbed the old mother of one of the policemen. And there can be no doubt that he was punished. There were seven hours of sustained torture—the details of which are largely unprintable. This culminated, they tell is, in a business known as "rocking"—concerning which the less you know the happier you will be. When that was finished, so was Stark.

Elsie Robinson

The next day the public was in an uproar. Old mother or no old mother—this was too much! But not all agreed. As, for example, the writer of this letter—

"Dear Miss Robinson:

"It is a puzzle to me why all the fuss over the death of that parasite Stark, simply because he died (a natural death for the criminal) at the police station while questioned. If we really want to get rid of such people, why aren't the police encouraged to act like that, instead of being criticized?

"If there is anything we should regret, it is that the police do not always handle similar cases in the same manner. The officers in this case should not only be released, but highly praised.

"A. Cintron,
"1925 7th Ave., N. Y. C."

Maybe you don't approve of that letter. But many will. They, too, will feel that men like Stark should be eliminated. As they should. But that isn't the point.

THE POINT IS—WHO SHOULD DO THE ELIMINATING?

SHOULD WE, AS A CIVILIZED PEOPLE, OBSERVE THE PROCESSES OF THE LAW? SHOULD POLICEMEN AS GUARDIANS OF THE LAW, BE PARTICULARLY CAREFUL IN UPHOLDING THAT LAW? OR HAVE INDIVIDUALS THE RIGHT TO TAKE THE LAW INTO THEIR OWN HANDS AND RUN AMUCK?

That's what Stark did. He was an individual who took the law into his own hands and ran amuck. He took what he wanted, did what he wanted, regardless. The beating of that old woman was just one incident in his career. It was the motive behind that beating—his general defiance of the law—that was the real menace in Stark.

BUT WHEN THOSE POLICEMEN BEAT STARK, THEY SHOWED AS GREAT A CONTEMPT FOR THE LAW AS STARK, HIMSELF, DID WHEN HE BEAT THAT OLD WOMAN. FOR A POLICEMAN HAS NO MORE RIGHT TO TAKE VENGEANGE INTO HIS OWN HANDS THAN HAS ANY OTHER INDIVIDUAL.

PEOPLE WHO IGNORE LAWS AND DEFY COURTS ARE A PUBLIC MENACE. THEY SHOULD BE SHUT AWAY. BUT THE MEN WHO BEAT STARK IGNORED THE LAW AND DEFIED THE COURTS AS MUCH AS HE DID. WHAT ABOUT THEM?

What is your vote?

Do you believe in Social Order . . . or Jungle Rule?

Just Folks

Now It's Culbertson

When I was but a little lad
I heard my dad insist
A system absolute he had
To play the game of whist.
But mother frequently confessed
She liked her own devices best.

Though little of the game I knew,
So young was I back then,
I gathered things which women do
Did not appeal to men.
And oft I heard my father say:
"My dear, you threw two tricks away!"

But times have changed. Now Culbertson
The women's love commands,
And I have grown to be the one
Who overbids his hands,
For Nellie mutters in my ear:
"You didn't have a two-bid, dear!"

No grudge 'gainst Culbertson have I,
I do not know the man,
But nothing have I done but sigh
Since first his vogue began.
And I'm fed up, while playing hands,
On Culbertson and his demands.

1—The five billion dollar loan to relieve unemployment and put billions of dollars into immediate circulation.

3—Immediate modification of the Volstead act, permitting light wines and beers, reviving industry and employment, providing government income, ending racketeering and restoring American personal liberty.

It's High Time Women Were Admitted to Seats in Cabinet

In the campaign defense of President Hoover's record, no claim will be made that his administration has shown either interest or generosity in the enlargement of woman's sphere in public life.

The President has given no sign of appreciating the insight, viewpoint, spirit or enthusiasm which women are capable of contributing to administrative tasks—even the highest.

Although the United States can hardly be said to have led in the political emancipation of women, it has followed close upon the heels of Great Britain in point of time and its laws may now be said to be IN ADVANCE of the world in the COMPLETENESS with which the political rights of women are recognized.

Yet this country has lagged behind other countries in according women the more distinguished forms of official recognition. A woman may be the sovereign of England. She may be a peeress in her own right and in one respect her prerogatives are broader than those of a male peer, because she can in her own right vote for a member of the House of Commons, which a male peer may not; in addition she may be a privy councillor of the king. For these high posts, woman is not only eligible, but has held them with success and distinction.

In this country the appointments of women to office have been confined as a rule to boards or commissions where special qualifications or experience were called for and suggested their appointment.

But no post has yet been bestowed upon a woman that recognizes in the broadest way her ability to meet the tests of high executive or administrative office.

The Hoover administration has seemed conscious of the fact that there is a large body of women voters whose goodwill it is desirable to retain, and it has sought to do so by appointments to secondary positions. Such appointments have been little more than propitiatory gestures.

THIS IS NOT AS IT SHOULD BE NOR AS IT WILL BE FOR LONG.

It is high time that women should be represented in the President's Cabinet. The mind and outlook of American womanhood should not be absent from the consultative body which surrounds the President and directs the course of administration.

There should be AMONG THE EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS of the government, one which is specifically charged with the supervision of NATIONAL EDUCATION.

It is inexplicable that such a department has not yet been created in this country. In France and England and other enlightened nations, there have been ministries of education for many years. Such a department should take over and PERFORM WELL many important tasks which TODAY ARE ILL-PERFORMED or altogether NEGLECTED.

The creation of such a department has long been advocated by the Hearst newspapers. Its establishment cannot long be postponed. As a matter of fact it should not be the subject of any delay whatever. The chief of such a department—the SECRETARY OF EDUCATION—would be a position PARTICULARLY SUITED to an intellectual and HIGH MINDED WOMAN.

As there is nothing to be hoped for in this field from the Hoover administration, it would be an admirable thing for Governor Roosevelt to declare his attitude on the subject, which beyond any doubt is that of a liberal Democrat.

It would be a distinct sign of PROGRESS—REAL PROGRESS—in a very RIGHT DIRECTION.

state papers on economic matters shows that Mr. Hoover's adversary has a vastly better batting average for accuracy and true insight.

Accordingly, from a strictly business standpoint, it would be safe for the country to switch from Mr. Hoover, who so FREQUENTLY MISJUDGED THE ECONOMIC TREND, to Governor Roosevelt, who before and during the depression had the COURAGE AND THE WISDOM TO TELL THE PEOPLE THE TRUTH, HOWEVER DISMAL IT HAPPENED TO BE.

Governor Roosevelt would restore an economic equilibrium by eliminating the causes of distress and by instituting a system of intelligent economic planning.

President Hoover, relying on relief through PATENT MEDICINE REMEDIES, which fail to go to the root of things, vigorously opposes "regimenting" men, and interfering with their freedom. But the freedom which President Hoover defends and provides is apparently in more specific terms merely the freedom of farmers to become pauperized and of 10,000,000 workers to become jobless dependents upon private charity.
